Father Slays 2, Wounds Girl, 15, Ends Own Life

Drink-Crazed Maryland Man Kills Wife, Step-Child and Self.

Bloody Massacre Ends Family Feud

Child, Lone Survivor in Household, Is Shot Three Times.

By Howard F. Wentworth.
A Staff Correspondent.

Wheaton, Md., Oct. 14.—A 15-year-old school girl, survivor of a bloody massacre here today, clung desperately to life in the Mongomery County General Hospital tonight.

She pleaded to live while physicians probed for three leaden slugs, pumped into her frail body by an enraged drink-crazed father. The father died by his own hand, but not until he had shot and killed the girl's mother and young step-sister.

Clarice Pierce, absent from the Silver Spring High School because other children laughed at her clothes, had just finished breakfast this morning when her father, James H. Pierce, 46, glassy-eyed and belligerent, stalked into the kitchen of their little frame house on the Seventh street pike, 2 miles beyond the District line.

Shooting Begins.

Clarice's mother, Mrs. Cassie V. Pierce, 46, was there. So was her step-sister, Mrs. Helen Cook, 27. They were talking together when Pierce entered.

A moment later, the placid rural community was shaken by the sound of blasting gunfire. Mrs. Cook, screaming in agony, ran from the front door. She staggered around the house, for an instant tried to raise herself to peer into the kitchen window, then collapsed in death on the lawn. She had been shot in the chest.

Clarice was next to run from the house. Crying for help, she plunged blindly into a doghouse, fell, regained her footing and hurtled headlong against the family automobile parked beside the house. She had been shot three times.

Inside the shooting had ceased. On the kitchen floor sprawled Pierce, a smoking revolver still clutched in his hand. Part way beneath a table, hunched on her knees, was Mrs. Pierce. She had been shot in the back, apparently while attempting to seek safety. Pierce blew out his brains.

End of Family Feud.

Walls, floors and doors on the first floor were splattered with blood. Pierce, according to fragments of the tragedy pieced together by Montgomery County police, chased his family from room to room in his murderous rage.

To him, it was the ending of a bitter family feud. For many weeks trouble had been brewing. Within a few days—October 25—he was scheduled to appear in Rockville

LaFontaine Files Protest on Taxes

Objects to $5,603.84 Demand and Cites Losses.

Jimmy LaFontaine, widely known Maryland sportsman, whose "place" on the line between the District and Prince Georges County repeatedly has been searched and watched for signs of gambling by State and county police, yesterday filed a petition with the U. S. Board of Tax Appeals, appealing a deficiency assessment of $5,603.84 in his 1932 income tax.

In the petition, LaFontaine, who gave his address as the 400 block of Maryland avenue southwest, alleged that the Bureau of Internal Revenue disallowed a deduction of $8,000 he had paid his lawyer, William H. Curran.

He further stated the bureau had disallowed a deduction of $16,000, which he asserted he lost in a business venture at Pinehurst, N. C. The nature of this business venture was not disclosed.

Highest Court Agrees to Rule On AAA Taxes

Talmadge Joins in 3-Way Attack on Farm Policy Before Tribunal.

By Robert C. Albright.

The AAA was subjected to a three-way barrage of litigation before the Supreme Court yesterday, as the high tribunal consented to review a pivotal case involving processing tax validity, and received two more petitions—one backed by Gov. Eugene Talmadge and the State of Georgia.

It was the first opinion day of the crucial fall session of the court, and some action was taken in 167 cases—among them a decision to pass on legality of Tennessee Valley Authority power sales. The court refused to consider habeas corpus proceedings filed by Thomas J. Mooney, serving a life term in connection with the San Francisco Preparedness Day bombing in 1916.

In a precedent-making request for permission to challenge constitutionality of the Bankhead cotton control act, the State of Georgia, at Talmadge's behest, denounced cotton law rules and regulations as "unconstitutional, illegal and arbitrary."

Processing Tax Appeal.

While the outspoken Talmadge, arch-foe alike of President Roosevelt and the New Deal, was carrying his fight to the highest court, an attack on AAA processing taxes was appealed to the court by the Washburn Crosby Co., of Minneapolis. The milling company asked for a review of Federal Judge Merrill E. Otis' ruling that only processing taxes due before the AAA law was amended last summer could be recovered.

Far-reaching in its effects on the AAA and its farm control projects, the Hoosac mills case meanwhile was taken under review by the justices. A Boston circuit judge held the cotton processing tax an unconstitutional delegation of power to the executive, and the Government is trying to get a speedy Supreme Court verdict.

Filed by State Official.

Chief Justice Hughes said the court would take Georgia's request under consideration, but there was no intimation of whether the justices will hear the complaint. A similar issue was involved in a Texas cotton case which the court agreed last spring to review.

The Georgia action was filed by B. D. Murphy, assistant attorney general of Georgia, and the first signer was M. J. Yeomans, State at-

Mellon Gives $10,000,000 For Museum

Plans for National Art Gallery Here Outlined in Deed.

Nucleus to Be His Own Group of Paintings Worth $40,000,000.

By the Associated Press.

Pittsburgh, Oct. 14.—The filing today of a deed disclosed that Andrew W. Mellon has given over $10,000,000 more for construction of a proposed art gallery at the National Capital.

The former Secretary of the Treasury, in conveying income-bearing securities to a trust, outlined in a simply worded seven-page document the purposes and uses intended by the establishment of the fund, together with his almost priceless collection of paintings heretofore given as a nucleus for a national institute of art.

"A national public art gallery or museum, having as its object the education of the people of the United States in the fine arts and cultural advancement of mankind," he said.

$25,000,000 in Art Nucleus.

The Mellon Public Educational and Charitable Trust, organized back in 1930 chiefly for the object of creating this gallery, has been actively operating since then for various hcaritable and educational purposes, and already has in its keeping for such a gallery pictures that cost the banker more than $25,000,000.

The new deed instructs it to take "necessary action" as promptly as possible toward establishment of this institution for the Government.

The building to be erected is not in any way to bear Mellon's name, but is to be known as "The National Gallery of Art of the United States" or by some similar name. With the completion of the gallery the collection of rare paintings, which Mellon has been gathering for many years can be suitably housed and shown.

Under the deed, this project must not be delayed beyond June 30, 1941, which allows the trustees a period of six years. In any event, the entire fund must be "used and disposed of" for such purposes.

Tax Question Unsettled.

Whether the gift will be subject to a Federal tax is a question the Board of Tax Appeals or the higher courts likely will have to settle.

The Bureau of Internal Revenue abruptly withheld a former ruling that gifts to the trust are tax exempt while the Mellon income tax case was under way last March. Attorneys say that to collect taxes on gifts made prior to that time the bureau will have to appeal to the board and prove the trust is not truly a "charitable and educational" one.

If an exemption is not allowed on

The new diet will convene October 28, when it is expected to pass immediately a vote of "no confidence" in the present Memel directorate.

Strikers Strip Girl Jobseekers, So Judge Sets Picket Limits

By the Associated Press.

Memphis, Tenn., Oct. 14.—An injunction limiting pickets was issued late today after two young women job seekers were stripped to the waist and the dress of another was torn from her shoulders by striking girl cosmetic workers who blocked the entrance of Plough, Inc.

The injunction was issued by Chancellor Lois Bejach on application of Abe Plough, president of the company, after a compromise between opposing attorneys on the wording of the restraining order and the number of pickets.

It followed a morning of disorder during which dozens of girls who answered a company advertisement for new workers were prevented from entering the plant.

The situation quieted down later after the three girls who were attacked were escorted home in automobiles by the police. One of the strikers received a black eye at the hands of a girl seeking employment, and Miss Helen Murray, president of the Cosmetic Manufactory Employes Union, said one woman tried to attack her with a pocket knife.

The union is affiliated with the American Federation of Labor. R. S. McCann, president of the Memphis Trades and Labor Council and of the State Federation of Labor, is directing the strike. Union men strengthened the picketing line.

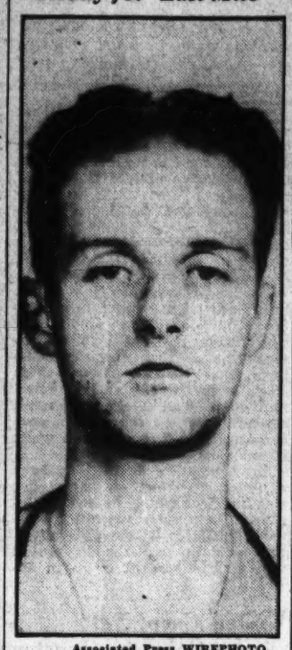

"If I were you I would go home," a striker advised jobseekers. "We don't want any trouble." A whole squad of police officers was busy keeping order.

The 75 or more strikers walked out last Wednesday after demanding a minimum $13 pay for a 40-hour week and claiming they were paid an average of $7 for a 48-hour week. Company officials denied any girl received less than $9.60.

McCann and A. B. Gallow, attorney for the union, said they would hold a conference late today. They said they were willing to submit the wage controversy to arbitration.

The injunction limits the number of pickets to eight at the main plant and five at a laboratory of the company, but does not affect pickets at two drug stores in which Plough is interested.

Walk to Chair Waited Calmly By Thompson

'Sex-Slayer' Eats Chicken, Remarks His Own Lack of Feeling.

By the Associated Press.

Joliet, Ill., Oct. 14.—Gerald Thompson, 26-year-old sex slayer, calmly awaited the summons tonight for his 25-foot walk to the electric chair after bidding his mother and convict brother farewell.

Prison officials granted him permission to receive visitors up to two hours before his execution, set for a few minutes after midnight.

"I never knew a man could be so close to death and be so calm about it," said the slayer of 19-year-old Mildred Hallmark, Peoria cafeteria hostess. "I am surprised at my own lack of emotion."

Eats Fried Chicken.

Bearing out his claim was the final evening meal which the former toolmaker ordered. It included fried chicken with all the "trimmings" and a dessert of ice cream.

But in spite of his stoicism, prison authorities took every precaution to insure that Thompson could not cheat the electric chair by committing suicide.

A new regulation, effective at once, by acting Warden Joseph Ragen kept Thompson's visitors outside his "death cell."

"No visitors are to be allowed in the cells of condemned men in the future," Ragen said. "They must visit with the bars and a mesh screen separating them from the prisoners."

He said the measure was intended to prevent the passing of any means

Mussolini Sees War in Europe With Britain as Its Instigator; League Orders Money Boycott

He Believes Frankly England Intends Force, Allen Informed.

But 'Die Is Cast,' Interviewer Told

Former Senator Calls Dictator Calmest Ruler in World.

Copyright, 1935, by the Associated Press.

Rome, Oct. 14.—Premier Mussolini apparently believes Great Britain means war and seems to have lost hope of avoiding a European conflict, former Senator Henry Allen, of Kansas, told the Associated Press tonight after an interview with Il Duce.

Allen talked with the premier for half an hour this afternoon. He said he found Mussolini in excellent spirits, despite the depressing effects of the times.

"In spite of the heavy international threat under which he is proceeding," said the former Senator, "Il Duce impressed me as being probably the calmest ruler in the world today.

"Apparently he regards the die as cast and he has no domestic problem so far as consolidation of his support among the Italian people is concerned.

"He gave me to feel that he does not hope for avoidance of a European war. He continues to assert he will not leave the League of Nations unless military sanctions are employed. Apparently he believes frankly that England means war."

British Goods Boycotted

Copyright, 1935, by the United Press.

Rome, Oct. 14.—First popular reaction to League financial and economic sanctions is a spontaneous boycott of foreign goods—especially British—storekeepers said tonight.

If the Britons refuse to buy Italy's spaghetti and gorgonzola cheese, the Italians can get along without British tea, homespun and whisky, it was said.

The manager of one food store said housewives already had begun to boycott tea, condiments and other products of the British empire.

"Even if Italy does not give us substitutes, we will do without them," they said.

Tailors said Scotch tweeds were completely out of favor and that the well-dressed Italian preferred even inferior home-made materials to cloths produced by the chief instigator of League sanctions.

Scotch and Irish whiskies have fallen from grace, as has British gin. One liquor dealer said many customers had adivsed him to cease stocking them. Thus far there has been no reaction against French wines, although Italian brands usually are preferred anyway.

Foreign circles believed these indications pointed to a future self-imposed boycott by the Italian people against goods of countries showing a "hostile attitude" toward Italy. They believed this was what Premier Benito Mussolini meant when he referred to Italy's acceptance of sacrifices necessary to achievement of her destiny.

Malta Is Reported Closed to Italians

Two Ships Said to Have Been Refused Entry.

By the Associated Press.

Valetta, Malta, Oct. 14. — Two Italian ships were reported without confirmation tonight to have been refused entrance yesterday to the boom-defended Malta Harbor.

The reports lacked verification on this Brintish insular naval base, but it was known the Italian liner Garibaldi, which plies between Naples, Malta and Tripoli, did not enter the harbor as usual.

Mail was taken from her by a British customs boat 12 miles out to sea.

The wives and relatives of three British naval officers announced they would leave tomorrow, lending substance to reports of the evacuation of the island by officers' families. A low charge was made for those d parting.

Some time ago a boom defense was swung across the mouth of the harbor by naval authorities.

Hull Urges American Nations To Take United Stand for Peace

Secretary, Welcoming Delegates to Pan-American Geography and History Institue Here, Cites Conflict Elsewhere as Warning.

By James D. Secrest.

Peace was described as the basis of advancement for science, literature and the arts by Secretary of State Cordell Hull yesterday in welcoming delegates to the second general assembly of the Pan-American Institute of Geography and History in the Pan-American Union.

His remarks on the present peace in the Western Hemisphere were greeted by applause by the several hundred Latin-American delegates and diplomats.

"It is significant that you are meeting as representatives of a group of nations at peace," he said. "Meetings like yours, with their splendid contributions to the common good, can only be held in such happy circumstances.

"Peace is the goal toward which civilization has been struggling and is the first and most necessary requisite for the growth and refinement of science, literature and art; for the progressive improvement of the social, economic and spiritual welfare of the peoples of the world."

Secretary Hull did not refer especially to the Italo-Ethiopian war, but declared "the disturbed and menacing conditions elsewhere constitute a solemn warning to us."

Challenges "Invaders."

Citing the "sincere devotion to the cause of peace" of the Americas, Hull said, "I am confident that I speak for all when, in the name of our 21 nations, I say that we are determined to keep the peace and that we call upon the rest of the world to do likewise."

The Secretary of State at the same time hurled a challenge to potential invaders of this hemisphere.

"To the threats of misunderstanding and war let the answer of the Americas be the maintenance of a stalwart community of nations, not one of which either contemplates or fears aggression."

Secretary Hull said the responsibility of preserving civilization and of carrying on human advancement may well rest with the united Americas.

"Unhampered as we are by hates and jealousies of the past, the road

France Convicts Couple As Fortification Spies

Metz, France, Oct. 14 (AP).—Two convictions today ended the activities of a woman and a man who sought the plans of France's northern frontier fortifications.

The woman, Florentine Jansen, a citizen of Luxembourg, was sentenced to four years in jail and fined 3,000 francs (about $180) for an attempt to bribe workers on fortifications near Thionville to give her the plans of the works.

The Saarguemines court sentenced William Lenze, an Italian, 18 months in prison and fined him 2,000 francs for similar activities on the south Saar frontier.

Aksum Priests To Serve Italy, Natives Told

Invaders Spread News in Move to Cut Resistance to New Advance.

Copyright, 1935, by the United Press.

Aduwa, Ethiopia, Oct. 14 (via Asmara).—Swift native runners penetrated deep into Ethiopia tonight, preparing the way for a second southward thrust by victorious Italian columns. The runners carried in the clefts of forked sticks letters calculated to forestall the slim chance of effective Ethiopian resistance.

The letters told that the Coptic Christian priests of Aksum, Ethiopian Holy City, had voluntarily surrendered the city to the Italians and had renounced Emperor Haile Selassie to swear allegiance to Italy.

Makale Next Objective.

The Italian high command waited for this news to filter southward before ordering another advance, for they felt it would reverberate through Ethiopia and greatly influence further submissions as the invaders proceed. The Coptic clergy are the real rulers of Ethiopia, with more real power with the common people than Haile Selassie, especially in the northern provinces.

Six more Ethiopian chieftains in the Aduwa-Aksum-Adigrat sector followed the example of Ras Haile Selassie Gugsa, commander of 12,000 men, and surrendered to the Italians with their troops.

The jubilant Italian military machine, lying 25 miles deep along a 60-mile front in Ethiopia, was rested from the arduous march from Asmara and awaited eagerly the com-

Loans, Credits Banned; Economic Offensive to Open Today.

Eden Sets Oct. 31 For Full Operation

Says Britain Officially Has Lifted Arms Ban From Ethiopia.

By the Associated Press.

Geneva, Oct. 14.—Financial sanctions designed to strangle Italy in money matters and force Premier Mussolini to halt his war in Ethiopia were approved tonight by half a hundred nations.

Tomorrow an offensive on the economic front will begin. Despite reservations and explanations from some countries, events moved swiftly.

At the close of one of the most hectic days Geneva has seen since the beginning of war in Africa, Anthony Eden, of Great Britain, informed the League Britain has officially lifted an arms embargo against Ethiopia.

He thus created the impression that the sending of weapons to permit the "King of Kings" to wage a real fight against Italy already has begun in considerable proportions.

To Maintain Embargo.

Simultaneously, Eden announced Britain's embargo of arms to Italy would be maintained. These steps were the first recommended by the League when it began to apply sanctions.

The official summary of the financial blockade program calls upon League states to make the following transactions impossible:

All direct and indirect loans, subscriptions to loans, bankers' or other credits, issues of shares or other appeals for money for the purpose of obtaining funds for the Italian government or for Italian public bodies or for persons and corporations in Italian territory.

The day disclosed formidable difficulties and perhaps delays in organizing a world-wide economic and financial boycott against a warring nation, already well supplied with munitions. The League discovered, among other things, that its member states have constitutions which can not idly be ignored.

Isolation Voted by 52.

Financial isolation of Italy was in effect approved by the League's plenary committee of 52 nations when it adopted recommendations of the financial sanctions committee, Austria and Hungary made reservations.

Exemptions in the financial sanctions are made as to religious and humanitarian projects. Thus Red Cross funds and those of religious organizations will not be shut off from Italy.

Argentina pointedly raised the constitutional question in the committee of 18 when Dr. Enrique Ruiz Guinazu, who is president of the League Council, explained that financial sanctions could not be applied in Argentina immediately because such steps would require the approval of Parliament.

Urged at a subsequent meeting to clarify Argentina's attitude, Ruiz Guinazu said his government must be consulted and that Argentina must be fair to all of its citizens, who include many of Italian origin. Argentina, however, did not make a formal reservation when the financial blockade came up for final decision.

Eden Offers Proposal.

The Netherlands and Switzerland also insisted on the necessity of having sanctions approved by national legislation. The Dutch delegate promised legislation would be obtained at the earliest possible moment, while the Swiss delegate said the move would have to be indorsed by his government.

These various reservations—formal and informal—led Eden to make a proposal, which was adopted, that governments be invited to put into operation at once such measures as they can enforce without fresh legislation and to make all practicable steps so that the Citizens of Santa Ana offered no resistance, according to reports received here, and the rebels still held the town tonight.

Nogales, Ariz., Oct. 14 (U.P.).—Rebels who captured the town of Santa Ana, Sonora, today were moving north toward the border, custom officials were informed tonight. Magdalena, 55 miles south of Nogales, was believed in their possession as communications from that point were cut off suddenly this afternoon.

of progress lies open before us," he said. "We are united in the common ideal of democracy for which the great heroes of all our countries have contended.

"We are endowed with the culture and knowledge of the older civilization from which we came, divested of narrow and selfish motives by transplantation and revitalized by the fresher outlook, energy and enthusiasm of a new world.

"A survey of our assets reveals conclusive evidence that the foundations have been laid and the material is at hand for the building in the Americas of a greater civilization than any of the past."

Earlier in the day Wallace W. Atwood, president of the institute and Clark University, called attention to the historical and cultural background of the Americas.

"It is already evident that among the people who long ago inhabitated the Americas," he said, "there were those who made progress in mathematics, astronomy, mining, agriculture, architecture and in the fine arts that is comparable to the wonderful progress made by the ancient peoples of the Mediterranean region or of India or of ancient China."

Cites Cooperation Need.

Dr. Atwood, in commenting on the importance of an organization such as the Pan-American Institute of Geography and iHstory, stated:

"The day has come when no individual and, perhaps, no single group of scientists can alone work out solutions for the larger and more difficult problems involved in the growth and interrelationships of nations."

Dr. Pedro C. Sanchez, director of the institute, reported to the assembly the achievements of the organization since the last meeting at Rio de Janeiro.

An enormous map of Hispanic America was described by Dr. Isaiah Bowman, president of Johns Hopkins University, in a discussion of advancements in American cartography made possible by the institute.

"Were a single individual to attempt to compile and draft the millionth map of Hispanic America he would require 150 years of full maturity, skill and strength to do the work.

"That map, in 102 sheets, has now been compiled and by the end of 1935 will be fairdrawn, ready for the engraver. This great map, begun in 1920, has taken 15 years to complete and has required an average of ten men a year during that period, or 150 man-years in all."

Welcome to the delegates upon behalf of the Pan American Union was extended by Senor Don Manuel de Freyre y Santander, Ambassador from Peru. The governing board of the union was host at a luncheon.

The convention will continue throughout the week. Among the addresses today will be "The Conquest of Distance," by Maj. James Doolittle, United States speed champion of the air.

Papers are being read in both English and French, copies of each address being available in each language.

Between You and Me

Coast Likes Hull's Trade Policy; Japan's NRA; Exports Controlled by Guilds.

By Raymond Clapper

SAN FRANCISCO, Oct. 14.—Businessmen on the Pacific Coast as in most other localities are critical of the Administration as a whole. But Secretary of State Hull's reciprocal trade policy finds a good deal of support.

The Pacific Coast is Japanese-conscious. It feels very close to Japan geographically and, of course, it has had the Japanese immigration problem and the alien land owner problem in its lap for many years. Here, too, the United States Fleet is based. This is the jumping off point for Hawaii, the key to the Pacific defense. What does the West Coast businessman think about Japan?

Here is a generalized view, from sources that ought to be competent.

Japan is buying more from us than we buy from them. The trade is complementary rather than competitive. For instance we sell our raw cotton and buy Japan's silk. Both commodities are mutually duty free.

There is considerable political play to the voter's anti-Japanese prejudice. The businessman who takes a larger view of national and international trade problems has no sympathy with the belief that war with Japan is inevitable. He regards it a bogey fanned up by politicians looking for easy votes.

As the business man's attitude is reflected here, he has no interest in trying to hold Japan back in Asia. If Japan wants a Monroe Doctrine in Asia like we have in the Western Hemisphere, it's all right with him. He doesn't pay any attention to the flag-waving speeches.

On the other hand, the coast business man, if he has any international trade interests, direct or indirect, is interested in reciprocal trade development. He takes the position that any agreements entered into will have been preceded by the most careful study and that California or American interests as a whole will not be hurt. Exporters here feel that California has much more to gain than to lose by development of reciprocal trade agreements, although actually Secretary Hull's program has had perhaps heavier criticism from California than from any other section.

The clash here in California is between specialty crops, such as citrus fruits and nuts, which demand prohibitive tariffs, and the mercantile trade, which sees that international exchange of goods can exist only by buying abroad as well as selling.

The Institute of Pacific Relations, in a statistical study of cotton, says Japan is the largest foreign consumer of American cotton now. One-half of the raw material from which Japanese textiles are made comes from American cotton fields. From 1931 to 1934 the decline in American exports of cotton manufactured goods (only in part due to Japanese competition) was $10,282,000. But the increase in exports of raw cotton to Japan in the same period was $36,913,000. In other words, expansion of Japanese cotton textile exports has, on balance, helped American export trade more than it has hurt it, the institute economists conclude.

So that on the West Coast, the rage of New England textile manufacturers over Japanese imports is not taken seriously. One business man said that those New England mills which are complaining most loudly already had lost their business to Southern mills and had been in trouble for years before they began raising the cry about Japanese imports. Of course it must be taken into account that Pacific shipping is a big activity on the Coast and that, like the stock market broker, the shipowner prospers when there is heavy trading, and he doesn't care who is buying or who is selling.

However, one development in Japan has recently gone a considerable distance toward winning friendlier feeling among American business interests. That is Japan's attempt to control her exports, in instances like the gentleman's agreement limiting textile exports to the Philippines, and the earlier voluntary export quotas adopted by Japan on cotton rugs and lead pencils to this country.

Japan has developed a sort of Japanese NRA. Forced by threat of having her goods roughly excluded by foreign countries, due to the cutthroat competition of small Japanese business men who flooded every possible market recklessly, the Japanese government has taken control of the situation and set up an extensive export guild system. This will enable her to regulate her export trade and avoid arousing foreign antagonisms which in the last years have become menacing to Japanese trade interests in the long run.

In 1933 there were 35 export guilds in Japan. Now there are 74 composed of 7,500 export firms. Recently the guild law has been amended to give the Japanese government control over the volume and direction of the country's foreign trade to accord with "national interest" and exports are being controlled to meet objections abroad, particularly from the United States and Great Britain.

These guilds—or trade associations—now have compulsory control over volume, price and quality of exportable products. Guilds can enforce requirements on members, and the government is empowered to act against nonmember chiselers. Voluntary cooperation, tried earlier, was found inadequate.

This development in Japan, paralleling our own NRA experience in a sense, is another evidence of the tendency away from automatic competition and rugged individualism in international trade and toward integration of foreign trade under government control. In Japan's case it may within a short time considerably ease trade tensions which have grown up around her in all directions.

Supreme Court Agrees to Rule On AAA Taxes

Talmadge Joins in 3-Way Attack on Farm Policy Before Tribunal.

torney general, who acted pursuant to a written request by Talmadge.

Georgia owns cotton farms in Tattnall and Baldwin counties, aggregating some 160 acres, but was restricted from marketing its cotton as it had not signed rules and regulations set up under the Bankhead law.

As a result, the brief alleged, the State "has suffered and is suffering irreparable loss and damages for the reason that it is deprived of the use, benefit and enjoyment of its property without due process of law * * * inviolation of the fifth amendment of the Constitution."

"Such irreparable damage," the brief went on, "flows not only from the deprivation of property heretofore suffered by complainant, but also from the fact that the existence of the Bankhead act, its present enforcement and the ability of the defendants herein named to continue to enforce it, have destroyed complainant's cotton poduction business and render the farm lands of the complainant worthless."

The action sought to enjoin Secretaries Morgenthau and Wallace, Attorney General Cummings and Commissioner of Internal Revenue Guy T. Helvering from enforcing the act in Georgia.

Authority Challenged.

"The obvious policy of the law," the State charged, "is to fix and maintain prices at an arbitrary level determined by the defendants. Power thus to control production within a State and thus fix prices is nowhere expressly or impliedly granted to the Congress by the Constitution."

Despite a Kansas City Federal District Court ruling that it was entitled to recover processing taxes due before the AAA act was amended, the Washburn Crosby Co., in another action filed yesterday, argued the Supreme Court should rule on the basic validity of the act.

This company's brief declared the AAA amendments of last August 24 would work irreparable injury by limiting the right to bring suit to recover processing taxes. Judge Otis, of the Federal District Court, had held the original AAA law illegally delegated legislative authority. It was on similar grounds that the Supreme Court last spring clipped the wings of the Blue Eagle.

10-Day Forecasts Of Weather Near

Scientists of Smithsonian Study Heat of Sun.

The oft-repeated weather predictions, "fair, slightly warmer tomorrow," is likely to become "showers and slightly cooler a week from Thursday." Forecasts for ten-day periods and longer will probably be made through ne wobservations of variations in the sun's heat by astrophysicists of Smithsonian Institution.

For years the fact of solar heat variation has been accepted, but until recently the fluctuations were small and hard to measure. It was also difficult to present rigid proof of the fact. Most of the measurements were made on Mount Montezuma, Chile, and scientists admitted some of the fluctuations might be caused by unappreciated terristrial factors, peculiar to the locality.

The new measurements, however, have been taken on the Sinai Peninsula, supposed to be near the spot where Moses received the Ten Commandments. These measurements have been checked against those taken in Chile. This system served to balance any divergence caused bzy terrestrial sources of error, since it was winter in one station while it was summer in the other.

Solar-radiation fluctuations have a noticeable effect on the earth's weather, according to meteorologists. Thus, the more information made available on the fluctuations, the easier it will be to predict weather for a week or so in advance.

Aksum Priests To Serve Italy, Natives Told

Invaders Send Out Word in Move to Cut Resistance to New Advance.

mand "avanti" to take the road southward again. Makale was to be the next objective on the road to Addis Ababa.

No hint of violence marked the entry into Aksum. Not a shot was fired. Not an Ethiopian soldier was seen. The Italian soldiers were under strict orders to avod any attack, as the high command realized the veneration in which the Ethiopians hold the city, the seat of many religious institutions and monasteries.

Moslem leaders in Aduwa and Aksum followed the lead of the Coptic priests and submitted to the Italians, making Italian authority unchallenged in the occupied territory.

Surrenders have opened to the Italians a vast fertile valley where they may advance hundreds of miles without resistance, other than the physical obstacles of the rugged country, almost without roads. Voluntary surrender of Aksum and Gugsa's surrender opened the way on both lower corners of the rectangle occupied by the Italian armies in the north for a renewed drive, probably without resistance. Ras Seyoum, Ethiopian commander in the north, was reported fleeing southward with 1,000 men. Only this small force constituted a threat to the Italian advance.

City Surrounded.

Askum was taken after a week of careful preparation. The city was almost surrounded. Lines of communication had been built up to its edge. Its surrender completed the first phase of the whole Italian campaign in the north.

The high command felt that Gugsa's defectionand thecoptic submissions were the most highly significant occurrences since the drive into Ethiopia began, practically placing in Italy's lap the northeastern third of the Ethiopian empire.

Further surrendersas the Italians advancewere expected. It was hinted that subsidies, on the British plan, await the minor chiefs who place themselves under Italian protection and desert Haile Selassie.

Eleven days of consolidation of positions followed the first advance of the Italian columns. Roads have been built behind the lines and huge quantities of supplies and munitions brought up. A thousand trucks and thousands of mules have brought tens of thousands of tons of supplies. A military road stretches back to Asmara, main base in Italian Eritrea.

The soldiers, gaunt and fatigued from short rations and killing marches, have rested, as have mules and horses, galled by pack saddles. But all is in readiness now for another advance, any time Gen. Emilio de Bono, Italian commander-in-chief, or Mussolini back in Rome deem it advisable.

Prisoners to Work.

Italian headquarters announced that 500 Ethiopian military prisoners, concentrated in Eritrea, will be put to work making roads. The 12,000 troops who surrendered with Gugsa will be reorganized by Gen. de Bono into a corps of irregulars to be usedagainst the Ethiopians, if further resistance is encountered on the march south.

The moment for which Italians have been waiting came yesterday when Gen. de Bono, in an impressive ceremony, dedicated a monument to the Italians who died at Aduwa in 1896. Twenty thousand Italian troops, their tattered uniforms mended and brushed, massed on the broad plain north of Aduwa and were reviewed following the ceremony. The "disgrace" of the defeat of 1896 was wiped out.

Organization of a civil administration of the conquered and surrendered territory was unde way.

E. C. Hamill Inquest Held Unnecessary

By the Associated Press.

Oakland, Md., Oct. 14.—Walter W. Dawson, acting State's attorney, said no inquest would be necessary in the death of Edwin C. Hamill, 25, found today in his rooming house with a bullet wound in his head.

Two notes were left by Hamill, both addressed to his wife, from whom he was separated. One note said: "Dot, I love you." It was signed "Eddie." The other, found in his coat pocket, said: "Dot, I tried to see you, but you weren't home. I don't like to do this but I guess I have to."

Young Hamill was a member of a prominent Garrett County family. His grandfather, the late Gilmor S. Hamill, was dean of the county bar, and his father, G. Semmes Hamill, killed in an automobile accident several years ago, was a prominent attorney.

Police Court on nonsupport charges. A warrant was sworn to by Mrs. Pierce last Friday.

The violent climax of the quarrel brought wild excitement in the neighborhood. With the arrival of police, physicians, undertakers and reporters, neighbors gathered in groups before the two-story white frame house to talk of the affair in whispers.

These same neighbors had often heard "unusual" things going on in the Pierce home. They had heard loud arguments. They once saw Pierce throw dishes at other members of his family. They had seen Mrs. Pierce with bruises and blackened eyes.

Operated Garage.

Pierce operate da garage adjacent to his home. He frequently had been intoxicated and unable to attend to business, neighbors said. As a consequence, business had fallen off. He had fallen in debt. The family had little to live on. Cralice couldn't continue school because her colthing was not 'goo denough" and her playmates ridiculed her.

At 8:50 a. mfi today, Pierce appeared at a Silver Spring hardware store ahd purchased ten .38 caliber bullets for 25 cents.

He started for home, stopped for a moment in his garage, and then entered the kitchen.

Across the road stood A. W. Saunders and Arthur Smith. They were startled at the sound of shots. Hurrying toward the house, they saw Mrs. Cook run into the yard. They stood in the roadway and watched open-mouthed as Clarice tumbled from the kitchen door, her stomach, shoulder and thigh punctured by bullets.

Girl Sent to Hospital.

When the shooting stopped, the two men approached. They ventured into the kitchen and found the bodies. Then, with the aid of J. Norman Atwood, they placed Clarice in an automobile and sent her to the hospital.

Since Friday, when his wife obtained the nonsupport warrant, Pierce had been openly bitter. Saturday, while talking to a group of friends in his garage, he said:

"Something is going to happen—just wait and see. They'll never get me into court."

The Pierces had lived in Wheaton for nearly 20 years. A son, Clay (Buckey) Pierce, 22, left home about a year ago to work as a mechanic in Kensington, Md. He returned for the first time in many months today—summoned by police. In the kitchen he had to step over his mother's body to look at his father.

"I don't know much about the family—I haven't been here in so long; I hope my sister gets well," was his only comment.

There are two other daughters—Mrs. Lena Marvin and Miss Bessie Pierce, 18, of Takoma Park, Md. Mrs. Cook lived in Washington in the 600 block of Columbia road northwest.

Certificates of murder and suicide were issued by Dr. H. H. Howlett, of Silver Spring.

League Invokes Money Boycott Against Italy

Loans and Credits Banned With Economic Offensive Due to Open Today.

measures recommended would be completely in operation by October 31.

Austria and Hungary continued their "abstentionist" tactics. The Austrian delegate said Austria is a debtor country and therefore not in a position to lend money to Italy. Hungary's representative took a similar stand.

The Venezuelan delegate merely notified the plenary committee he is still awaiting instructions from his government.

Litvinoff Begins Drive.

Maxim Litvinoff, Russia's commissar for foreign affairs, began a drive to fix the exact obligations of League states under Article XVI of the League Covenant—the one covering sanctions.

In connection with the projected offensive against Italy on the economic front, delegates attached importance to a decision of the committee of 18 to undertake an immediate study of the application of embargoes on raw materials and products essential to Italy for a continuance of hostilities.

On official communique also said an inquiry would be pushed for "the cessions of Italian exports to countries which are members of this League."

The pawers devided in this connection upon mutual assistance, if necessary, so that trade losses may be shared equitably.

Major Points Outlined.

The communique indicated that importance must be given the following points in the application of sanctions:

"The desirability of ascertaining what percentage of the general trade of each country is constituted by transactions with Italy as a whole; that transit toward Italy must not be neglected; the co-operation by non-League states must be considered, especially as regards the transit of commodities to Italy."

In other wards, League leaders fear Austria and Hungary may wreck a finely laid screme of world powers by allowing the necessities to reach Italy through their territories from neutral nations, such as Germany.

Because of the growing complications in the application of sanctions, the committee og 18 created three sub-committees to work out separate phases of sanctions against Italy.

One will study a "buy nothing from Italy" plan, another will hand lethe problem of compensation for states likely to suffer disporportionately if sanctions are applied strictly, such as Rumania, Greece and Switzerland, and the third will g ointo the constitutional and legal difficulties of certain states, such as Argentina.

Overcome by Gas, Woman Recuperating

Mrs. Hilda Moran, 30, who was found overcome by gas in the kitchen of her home, 3900 Connecticut avenue, yesterday, was reported recovering by physicians at Emergency Hospital last night.

The young woman, an expectant mother, was rescued from the gas-filled room and revived by firemen and Emergency Hospital ambulance physicians. She left a note addressed to her husband, Preston W. Moran, a bookkeeper. He refused to reveal its contents.

of self-slaying to execution prisoners.

His mother, Mrs. Florence Whiteside, ordered his body turned over to a Joliet undertaker to be sent to Peoria for burial. She and her son, Victor Thompson, a fellow-prisoner of his brother, were allowed lengthy visits with the doomed man. Victor was sentenced to the prison last summer for a sex crime against a small boy.

His grandparents, Mr. and Mrs. George Thompson, and stepfather, Charles Whiteside, also consoled Gerald.

Tells of Regrets.

To the Rev. Eligius Weir, Catholic prison chaplain, Thompson said: "Maybe the world will be better off without me."

He added to his spiritual adviser: "I regret all the grief I have caused."

The crime for which he was condemned was branded as one of the most brutal in the history of Peoria. On the night of June 17, he offered the pretty young cafeteria hostess a ride home as she was waiting for a street car after attending a theater.

The next morning her body was in a ditch in a cemetery. She had been struck a heavy blow on the jaw when she resisted the advances of her escort, and had then been attacked.

Supply Men Disband.

The Greater Washington Building Supply Association yesterday voted to disband and become the Building Supply Division of the Merchants and Manufacturers Association. H. W. Heine, president of the defunct organization, was elected chairman of the new division. Edward D. Shaw, secretary of the Merchants and Manufacturers Association, will also serve as secretary of the trade division. Others elected yesterday were Bennett O. King, vice chairman, and Thomas S. Gulick, treasurer.

Visible Grain Supply.

New York, Oct. 14 (AP).—The visible supply of American grain shows the following changes in bushels: Wheat increased 2,149,000; corn decreased 456,000; oats increased 1,297,000; rye increased 201,000; barley increased 67,300.

Bituminous Output.

The National Coal Association estimates bituminous coal production in the United States for the week ended October 5 as approximately 7,000,000 net tons. Production for the corresponding week: 1934, 7,098,000 tons; 1933, 5,783,000 tons.

Feidelson to Head Board at Atlanta

Labor Body Picks Former Richmond Editor.

Appointment of Charles N. Feidelson, for the last year publicity adviser to Harry L. Hopkins, WPA director, as its regional director for the Atlanta, Ga., area, was announced here last night by the National Labor Relations Board.

Feidelson came to Washington following ten years as an associate editor of the Birmingham (Ala.) Age-Herald. Prior to that period he had served in an editorial capacity on several newspapers, including the old Richmond Evening Dispatch. He became known widely in Virginia, both through this connection and from his work at William and Mary College as professor of journalism.

Before taking up journalism as a career, Feidelson was juvenile court judge in Savannah for five years. He is a native of Georgia and a graduate of that State's State university.

On the Air Today

OCCASIONALLY I find myself preoccupied at the theater or while listening to the musical interlude in an air show, wondering (for no particular reason) what this or that artist did with his time as a youngster. Was he like other kids in the neighborhood?

Fred Wile, jr., who delves into the pasts of prominent radio personalities as a part of his chores for a New York advertising agency, has compiled this material which serves as an answer in part:

Lawrence Tibbett—Failed to make the Glee Club at Los Angeles' Manual Arts High School, then went out for wrestling. Was beaten in every match!

Jack Benny—Called "Mouse" by his Waukegan, Ill., school mates because he was so shy and quiet.

Helen Hayes—Honor student at Sacred Heart School (Washington). Took feature parts on Broadway during summer vacations.

Don Wilson—Played all-American football, University of Colorado.

Mary Livingstone—Won freshman poetry contest, Seattle High School students.

Phil Baker—Laziest pupil in Philadelphia public school system. Had already made up his mind to go into theater because it was one profession which permitted late sleeping in the morning.

Michael Bartlett—Was a "chorus girl" in Princeton's famous Triangle Club.

Don Voorhees—Lead the Allentown, Pa., high school band.

Agnes Moorehead—Studied for master's degree at University of Wisconsin.

ANNOUNCING!

AMERICA SPEAKS

The National Weekly Poll of Public Opinion

Authoritative, Impartial, Scientific

THE WASHINGTON POST announces the weekly appearance, beginning October 20, of AMERICA SPEAKS. This National Weekly Poll of Public Opinion is sponsored by the American Institute of Public Opinion and is an authoritative, non-partisan, fact-finding project intended to further the cause of representative government in the United States.

Each week, AMERICA SPEAKS, the National Weekly Poll of Public Opinion, as the result of personal interviews and ballots sent into every State and to persons in all walks of life, will make known the voice of the Nation on some major issue of the day.

One week the question answered by the voters of the United States will be whether Government expenditures for relief and recovery are too high or too low. Another week the result will show whether President Roosevelt is gaining or losing in popular strength. Again, the people will make known their wishes about curbing the power of the Supreme Court, about paying the bonus, about the procedure to be followed before war is declared, or about Government regulation of business and industry.

AMERICA SPEAKS is not an effort to further the cause of one politician or of one party. Republican, Democratic, and independent newspapers have united to underwrite the huge cost of these weekly polls and to make this venture into the realm of political science a workable reality.

AMERICA SPEAKS is a scientifically accurate and strictly impartial means of making the voice of all the people articulate.

AMERICA SPEAKS will appear weekly in THE WASHINGTON POST beginning Sunday, October 20.

Card Reading.

Ability to reconstruct the opponents' unseen hands from the fall of the cards or from the inference in bidding is the supreme test and thrill of a masterful player. The difficult art of card reading calls for the inductive power of a Sherlock Holmes, the science of a mathematician and the patience of a spider. If most squeezes, or other end plays, are then unattainable for a fairly good player, it is because he has not yet learned how to lay the proper foundation for such plays by placing in opponents' hands the precise suit lengths and key cards. He must learn how to read through the back of the cards.

The following hand illustrates card reading at its best by the declarer, which resulted in a brilliant squeeze:

NORTH
WEST: ♠ K Q ♥ K 6 2 ♦ A K J 3 ♣ Q J 6 2
EAST: ♠ 4 3 2 ♥ A 5 4 ♦ 5 4 ♣ A K 8 4 3
SOUTH

East is declarer at a contract of six clubs. The opening lead is the spade ace, followed by a second spade, which is won in dummy (spade king). In addition to the trick already lost it appears that East has a sure heart loser. Apparently the only way to win is by taking the diamond finesse (diamond jack), but the declarer decides to try a few rounds of other suits to get some clew to distribution. East, therefore, enters his hand with the club king and ruffs the third spade in dummy with the club queen, whereupon North discards a heart. It is now clear that South held, originally, six spades. A second round of trumps is played and both North and South follow. Of South's 13 cards 8 now are located, and the picture has changed! The attractiveness of the diamond finesse has vanished since it is not probable that four of South's five remaining cards are diamonds, and thus it is probable that North, holding the larger number of diamonds, has the queen. If South has three diamonds and two hearts a sure squeeze will develop, but if he has two diamonds (without the queen) no play will win. If he has three diamonds to the queen, the queen will drop when declarer ruffs the third round of diamonds. Even if South has four diamonds, one of North's three might be the queen, when the finesse will lose, but the play of ace, king and small one will win. Therefore the diamond ace and king are played, followed by the diamond deuce, ruffed in declarer's hand. The queen does not fall, and East now plays his fourth trump, so that the situation at the end of the ninth trick is as follows:

NORTH: ♠ None ♥ Q J 3 ♦ Q ♣ None
WEST: ♠ None ♥ K 6 2 ♦ J ♣ None
EAST: ♠ None ♥ A 5 4 ♦ None ♣ 8
SOUTH: ♠ 5 6 ♥ 9 7 ♦ None ♣ None

South's original holding was: Spade ace, jack, 9, 8, 6, 5; heart 9, 7; diamond 9, 7, 5; club 10, 7. North's original holding was: Spade 10, 7; heart queen, jack, 10, 8, 3; diamond queen, 10, 6, 3; club 9, 5.

The last trump is now led by East and a heart discarded from dummy. North is compelled to keep the diamond queen and discard a heart, making good the three hearts in declarer's hand.

Helen Jackson Wed.

Simpson, in Madison Heights. After a wedding breakfast Mr. and Mrs. Morton left for a bridal trip, after which they will make their home at Courtland.

Things as They Are Free Trade Possible Only When World Nations Become One Big Family.

By Samuel Crowther.

ALREADY those who depend upon foreign trade for a living are bitterly protesting against the neutrality measures that the Government has taken. They claim the right to conduct business as usual, regardless of the consequences. The professional peace advocates are roundly denouncing their cupidity. It may be that the professional peace people are, for once, right about something.

But only a little while ago the peace societies were joining hands with the foreign trade men to proclaim that wide, free and open foreign trade was the only way toward keeping the world's peace. And even now those who would have us join the League and enforce economic sanctions against belligerents are declaiming against any policy of self-containment for America. If these solemn, righteous men and women had a sense of humor, they would see that they are hanging their clothes on a hickory limb and running away from the water.

The rather silly predicament of the internationalists is due to their opportunist attempt to mix a mawkish sentimentality with trade. The British missionaries used to put sound Manchester pants on the heathen as a holy duty, and no Victorian cotton mill owner could even conceive of a pantless Christian. Our older pacifists were against trade. They got worked up about imperialism and dollar diplomacy. The antiimperialists of today are, like the anti-Facists, mostly Communists and are against trade as a symbol of horried capitalism. The phrase "dollar diplomacy" has an archaic air. To the minds of realists, it connotes not the exploitation of foreign nations for the benefit of American investors, but exactly the reverse. The great objection to dollar diplomacy lies in the ingenuity of our ineptitude.

* * * *

THE real point is not whether we shall be absolutely self-contained or whether we shall be free traders. The real point is the degree to which we shall permit our domestic economy to depend upon the economy of foreign nations. That is where the internationalists fall down. That, too, is where those who would increase our foreign trade at any cost fall down. An export association recently issued a brochure which sought to prove that over 14,000,000 of our workers were dependent on foreign trade. Of course that is not true, but those who put out the figures failed to realize that, if such were the case, it would be the high duty of the nation to police the whole world in order that no item of our trade be interfered with. Under such circumstances, we could never mind our own business and, as a matter of self-protection, would be compelled to intervene in every foreign row. Great Britain, as a converter of imported raw materials, for many years has had to do exactly that.

Nationalism is only a bogeyman. Discussing our condition if we neither imported nor exported anything is as academic as free trade. The doctrine of free trade is and always has been simply a doctrine. Free trade will be possible—and perhaps desirable—if, as and when the whole world adopts the same standards of living, laws and morals—and becomes one nice big family.

* * * *

IN the meantime, we need to consider the realities. If we import anything which we can grow or make at home, we become dependent upon a foreign source of supply and we must either fight to keep that source open or be forced into nationalism. If we develop any export to such a degree that our economy is dependent upon keeping an outflow of goods, we must fight to keep up that outflow—which means that not only must we quell disturbances but also we must prevent any foreign nation that buys from us seeking another seller or making the goods at home. Foreign trade is not all sweetness and light. Even Secretary Hull is learning that.

The amount of our foreign trade does not matter so much as the extent to which it makes us dependent. Foreign trade is a consequence of prosperity and not a cause of it. Our principal imports for years have been those articles on the free list which we do not make or grow at home. The situation is changing now with the fantasies of the reciprocal trade agreements. It will change further as we go more fully into the making of synthetic rubber and the manufacturing of paper from slash pine. But our principal imports rise and fall with our domestic needs—we buy rubber principally for tires and not as a diversion. It is likewise with our exports. They vary with our prices and the condition of foreign buying power. World production is down and so foreign trade is down.

If a large volume of exports and imports is necessary for our domestic prosperity, we should recognize that necessity and be prepared to keep the channels of trade open by force of arms. Likewise we must be prepared to keep our foreign customers through force of arms.

Fortunately, it is not necessary for us to be a dependent nation. We need be only as dependent as we elect to be. We can proceed with our eyes open. Lugging in nationalism, internationalism or peace only confuses the issue.

Proletarian Drama.

Some furious discussion should be provoked by the announcement that the American Federation of Labor intends to employ the theater as a vehicle for propaganda. Many will superciliously inquire whether the result can possibly be art. Others will ardently acclaim the project as promising a realization of the long-awaited "proletarian drama" in this country.

In early England, the miracle plays were pure propaganda, yet they developed the essential elements of the unquestionably artistic Elizabethan drama. On the post-war German stage there was a very interesting wave of revolutionary plays, greatly aided by the technique of Reinhardt. John Masefield has called the propaganda-plot an art-form and one essentially American. The fact that propaganda may be art, though by no means easily, is undeniable.

But can the theater as an institution successfully invite the invention of a proletarian drama? True art-movements must begin spontaneously. Art fears both artifice and subsidy. An American proletarian drama will come into its own when there are enough American proletarian dramatists who are also artists. If any seek to apply forced draft to the process, the result will be more comic than convincing.

All plays which are lasting successes are essentially artistic, whether be propaganda or "escape;" the work of a Toller or a Barrie, an expression of a weary bourgeoisie's romantic dreams or of an energetic proletariat's scarcely less romantic aspirations. The triumph of art is art. And while the road of the artist can be made easier by discriminating assistance, it can also be transformed into a facile downward plunge by insistence upon special pleading of any kind.

Frustrating The Physicians.

Man, in his struggle to escape his doom, may be likened to the miserable hero in the tale of the pit and the pendulum. The walls closing in about him are the natural forces of disease and degeneration. The swinging blade above is a device of his own making—war, violence and the accidents invited by machines. Medical science has gone far to slow up the motion of the walls. But the blade which he himself has forged sweeps ever closer and closer.

To put it more concretely: vital statistics show that the expectation of life in this country is appreciably longer today than it was in 1920. With only a few exceptions, disease is being checked in the United States. But official figures also reveal that deaths due to man's own recklessness are mounting yearly. Automobile fatalities are steadily on the increase. In 1933 the rate was 23.3 per 100,000 estimated population. Last year 33,980 persons lost their lives to set the ratio at 26.9 per 100,000.

Through vast expenditure and constant vigil, the death rate from tuberculosis has been cut down from the figure of 125 per 100,000, as it stood in 1912, to 56.1 today. The social gain is less apparent when it is realized that auto fatalities have jumped from 2.9 to 26.1 per 100,000 in the same period.

The Burgee Counts.

New York newspaper readers were treated yesterday to a vivid account of the hurricanes which buffeted the schooner Atlantic on its recent crossing from England. The trim craft, which holds the all-time transatlantic record for sailing vessels of 12 days 4 hours, needed better than 35 days to come from Southampton on this trip. With sails blown out and superstructure battered, the 303-ton property of Mr. Gerard Lambert provided romantic copy for front-page headlines as it was warped into its winter berth.

Nothing, however, was said of the countless other (and smaller) ships which must have gone through the same storms—the fishermen out of Northeast ports and the coasters near the Caribbean. If their crews ever read New York papers they will appreciate fully the disdain with which Kipling's characters in "Captains Courageous" looked over at a yacht bobbing daintily in Boston Harbor as they dragged in after a blow on the Banks.

To judge from his name, Mr. Lambert's captain is a Scandinavian. It could do him no libel to describe him, sight unseen, as a squint-eyed and horny-handed mariner of the old school. It is noted in the story that before skippering the Atlantic he had officered for several other well-known millionaires. This is only natural. There are only a few masters today whose knowledge of seamanship runs beyond Diesel and steam engines, and they may be easily rated. The sailor (in the strict sense) of today is known by the yacht club burgee he flies.

First Steps In Sanctions.

Following declaration of an arms embargo, the eague of Nations has approved a financial boycott of Italy as the next step toward severance of economic intercourse with the Covenant-breaking State.

Neither of these "sanctions," however, will of themselves have much immediate effect in curbing Italy's conquest of Ethiopia. The aggressor is already well supplied with arms and so long as it is able to obtain raw materials for the conduct of war, a ban upon munitions shipments will not be seriously hampering. The financial boycott just announced is perhaps even less effective, although it sounds very imposing.

As a matter of fact, exports to Italy have already been severely curtailed, because foreign concerns are unwilling to risk selling to an almost insolvent country on credit. Long-term loans are virtually out of the question, in view of Italy's disordered finances. The United States market is also closed to flotations of Italian securities by the Johnson act banning loans to defaulting States. The Fascist Government has sequestered credits and securities belonging to Italian subjects but the sums obtained are not believed to be large. Gold reserves used to pay for imports have been reduced about 27 per cent since the end of May, and at the present rate of depletion, will soon be exhausted.

Consequently, the chief and only dependable means that Italy now has of building up cash balances abroad (apart from tourist trade and immigrant remittances, no longer to be relied upon) lies in sales of her exports.

If economic sanctions are to be effective, therefore, the League States must be prepared to make real sacrifices, such as banning exports of essential raw materials to Italy or boycotting imports from Italy. Efforts to draw up a list of commodities subject to export embargoes, however, are said to be most difficult. Great Britain would be especially hard hit by embargoes upon such basic raw materials as rubber, tin, coal and other commodities which figure in the trade of the British Empire as well as the mother country. Moreover, so long as there is a possibility that articles on the forbidden list will be supplied by non-League members, such as Germany and the United States, it is evident that the sacrifices entailed by an extension of trading sanctions may fail of their purpose.

Another and doubtless more efficacious method of applying economic sanctions, which is preferred by the British, calls for an embargo upon imports from Italy. But France, Switzerland and other countries that have clearing agreements with Italy are unwilling to surrender an arrangement which assures them of payment for their own shipments to Italy, especially at the urging of Great Britain, which has no such protection. In other words, each League member would like to work out a scheme for disciplining Italy that would throw the chief burden of the sacrifice on the "other fellow."

None of these difficulties, however, were unexpected and in face of the enormity of the problem the progress made in less than two weeks is more striking than the fact that Italy need not greatly worry about the pinch of measures so far taken. All discussions upon the operation of Article 16 have agreed that, since the League is a coopera tive association and not a superstate, sanctions must be applied gradually and by general consent. The question is whether the effect of such limited pressure will be adequate to stop a determined government. On that the future holds the answer.

To Err Is Human.

A book has been written on what makes us behave like human beings. While there's not much comfort in knowing why we do certain idiotic things, at least there's consolation in the realization that everybody does them. Lives there a man with soul so dead who never forgot to put alcohol in the car; who never overslept Big Ben's warning; and who never left his keys in his other coat? But John Doe isn't unnecessarily worried about these little shortcomings if he can point to a precedent for all of them. And when it comes to an alibi for saying the wrong thing at the right time and putting the right letter in the wrong envelope, he has plenty of antecedents in the world of bigwigs.

It may be that one swallow doesn't make a spring, but the best laid schemes of mice and politicans are often upset by a single mistake. In 1934, Jim Farley rationally decided not to lend his support to Upton Sinclair after thousands of mimeographed endorsements had been printed at Democratic National headquarters. Out of the whole lot that were scrapped, one found its way to California and the face of the Democrats was no less red than Mr. Sinclair's political proclivities. The famous Kentucky feuds looked like mere preliminaries last month when the word designed to include Gov. Laffoon among the President's trainboard guests was inadvertently omitted from the telegraphic invitation. And no one can say that it's a "typographical error" when letters from California are being received bearing "Merriam-for-President" letterheads and "Merriam-for-Vice President" envelopes!

The Furies must have a good laugh when they see how impotent man is against the little blunders of life. A whole lawsuit may hang on a misplaced comma. Even the most august establishments are not immune to the weight of trifling mistakes as was demonstrated a while back when a communication from the League of Nations, intended for Iceland, went to Russia, and vice versa. It's the sort of thing that made a certain stenographer of fiction jump up and shout, "Down with capitalism and punctuation!"

Words And Deeds.

The Japanese Foreign Minister, as a result of vigorous representations from Moscow on recent "incidents" along the Manchukuo-Siberian frontier, urges that this boundary should be more plainly marked. Since the Russians themselves propose inquiry by a mixed commission on the scene of these clashes between armed patrols, a satisfactory settlement would not seem very difficult. Any dispute as to where Manchukuo ends and Siberia begins can, of course, be handled much more authoritatively by surveyors than by sniping across an indefinite imaginary line.

But Mr. Hirota's constructive suggestion of careful frontier delimitation would carry more weight if there were any real certainty that the Japanese civil government can control its war lords. During the seizure of Manchuria it was very noticeable that pacific assurances from Tokyo were frequently followed by actions of the Kwantung army giving the lie to foreign office statements. Suspicions then formed are all too easily recalled by the present border disturbances.

With the world somewhat more than fully occupied with the Italian crisis, it very likely would be a strategically advantageous moment for Japan to strike at Russia, if the aim is annexation of Eastern Siberia to the Japanese Empire. Such ambitions, however, are steadfastly denied in Tokyo. "Our government," said Foreign Minister Hirota, acclaiming solution of the Chinese Eastern Railway controversy early this year, "is planning to accelerate the peaceful development of Soviet-Japanese relations by redoubling its efforts for the solution of other pending problems."

In view of this attitude it is strange that incidents should so frequently arise on the Manchukuo-Siberian border, where Russia certainly has no interest in provoking a clash. Japanese generals, who might avert such potentially dangerous affairs, are not making the diplomatic task of their country easier by failing to do so. Nor are the scheduled consultations of high Japanese military officers in Chinese cities, such as Shanghai, an encouraging sign. They inevitably arouse an uneasy feeling that fair words from Tokyo may at any time be refuted by the acts of the high command.

Melodrama In Manhattan.

To this generation the announcement that the Cherry Sisters are returning to New York City, the scene of their former dubious triumphs, will not mean much. But to those who were theatergoers at the turn of the century it is more than a mere theatrical comeback. It is a revival of the Gay Nineties, of the days of bloomers and blushes, of shirtwaists and sighs. Yet not to be forgotten is the fact that the sisters were also regarded as quaint 35 years ago, when they first appeared in the role of verbal Carrie Nations. Their home-made costumes and home-made morals made them a strange contrast to the plush and gilt eruptions which gave the homestretch of the nineteenth century its nickname.

Addie and Effie are the only sisters left of the once-famous Cherry quartet. They were as full of rococo righteousness as 'Way Down East, but all they got for their pious pains were catcalls and showers of tomatoes on the slightly ripe side. The plight of Eliza crossing the ice was not more perilous than their nightly declamations against whisky and worldliness. Nets, as well as their self-professed strength of character, were necessary to render them immune against cabbage-throwing audiences.

New York has had many famous sister teams, but none more unique than this. This is their first appearance in a modern night club, and as a Broadway attraction, they are competing with such shows as "Anything Goes," and "The Call of the Wild." But such strong competition does not worry the Cherry Sisters. They boast an accomplishment that is rarer these days than any fan dance. And that, ladeez and gintulmen, is a natural-born, old-fashioned, gen-u-wine ability to blush!

Elsa Maxwell says there are only ten gentlemen left in the world. If true, this is sad news for blondes.

All-time lows in thievery were reported during the week. A piccolo was stolen in Boston and an 1895 car in San Francisco.

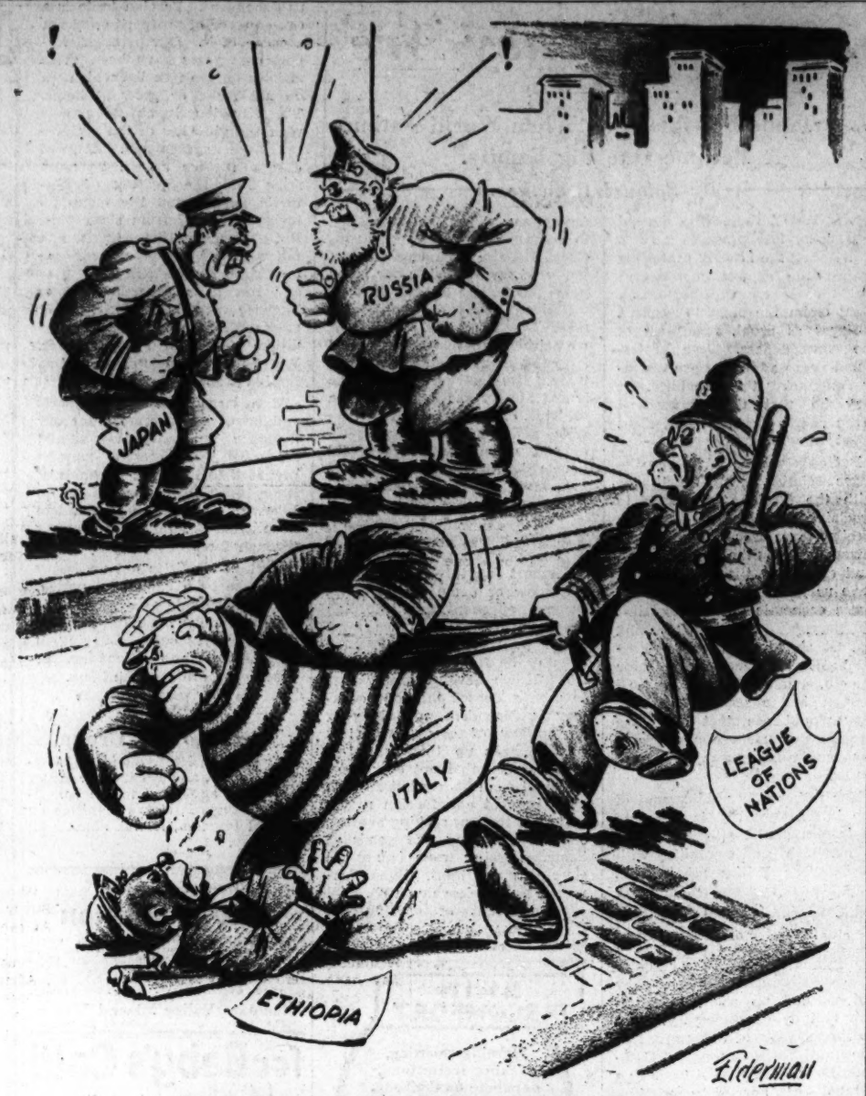

It's easy to identify those who live on Easy street these days. They're uneasy.

Grade Crossings.

From the St. Louis Star-Times.

At least another 100 years will be needed before railroad grade crossing elimination brings even relative safety to trains and highway traffic, at the present rate of progress on relief public works. Thirty-three of these projects have just been approved in Missouri by the State director of the national emergency council.

Grade crossings should be eliminated for all main and secondary roads outside of the towns and for all traveled streets inside of town limits. Until they are, crossing tragedies will continue to take human lives and destroy property, including the property of the railroads. But crossing elimination never will make a dent in the accident record unless the Federal Government moves faster than it has, and on a wider scale. The railroads can't do it. Neither can local taxpayers, and it is saddling the cost too much on one class to pay for all this work from gasoline taxes and auto license funds. Wholesale grade crossing removal is a general transportation problem, as much the responsibility of the Federal Government as the lighthouse service and the Coast Guard.

Letters To The Editor.

The Post welcomes letters from its readers. All communications must be signed with the writer's name and address. Upon publication initials or pen names will be used if requested. Letters are subject to condensation, and in no case should they exceed 250 words.

Welcome Assurance.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: On my return from the National Recreation Congress in Chicago I learned of the gracious letter addressed through your columns, under date of September 20, to the Department of Playgrounds by "A Subscriber." I hope it is not too late to convey through The Post our appreciation to the grandmother of the three young visitors who enjoyed the Chevy Chase Playground through the summer. That was a crowded and busy time for us in the Department of Playgrounds and The Post carried almost daily evidence, by story and picture, that it was a happy time for many thousands of boys and girls in Washington. It is good to have the assurance that mothers and grandmothers, to say nothing of fathers, are satisfied with our efforts.

League Never Interred.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: Opportune, forceful, instructive, is the article, "The League of Nations Rises from Its 'Grave' to Point the Way to Peace," which appeared in Sunday's Post.

It is well that the author should quote the word "grave," for the League never was interred. It started life as a foundling, begotten by the genius of Woodrow Wilson, was denied nourishment at home, was kicked from door to door, and finally was adopted by European statesmen who have shown a greater breadth of understanding than have the alleged leaders of American opinion who turned thumbs down when the life of the League was at stake.

When the Atlantic can be spanned in a few hours by a fleet of bombing planes, and the far Pacific is little more than a day and a night distant the United States no longer is isolated from other countries and has become part and parcel of the world's nations. Therefore we should make peace with the child we spurned, a child grown to be a giant, and join with others in upholding its hands.

Navy Yarders' Case.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: I have read your editorial entitled "The Government as Employer." In that capacity, the richest employer on earth, after a wait of 53 years, paid 1,377 Navy Yarders $322,000—but no interest.

And it owes millions yet to thousands of other Navy Yarders who dropped out in disgust after vainly "dunning" the United States for about 23 years.

Whoever beats that shameful record "may take the large purple silk parlor rug," the first prize for welchers. Tell the New Deal press agents to laugh that off.

GEORGE HIRAM MANN.

United States, Neutrality And Peace.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: The problem of peace is so important that every point of view should be considered, and your publication of "The Road to Peace," by John Foster Dulles, was justified. He is right in maintaining that the world must recognize the necessity for an occasional territorial change and for economic fluidity, but surely he overlooks the necessity for strong pressure to prevent aggression. He says that "the true explanation of the imminence of war lies in the inevitability of change." To assign this as the one and only explanation of war is a serious misreading of history and no solution of the peace problem can be based on such an error.

There have been some "inevitable" wars, chiefly wars of rebellion and nationalism which undid the work of previous wars of aggression. Within their settings, that is, unless the dominating governments had turned from their tyranny or had peacefully let their subjects go, the revolts of the low countries against Spain, of the American Colonies against George III, and of the Balkan States against Turkey were no doubt "inevitable." Outside of wars of this class, most wars have been inevitable only in the sense that the aggressor thought he saw victory within his grasp, and in that no international organization existed to take the victory, the glory, and the loot from him. If there had been effective peace machinery, whole rows of "inevitable" wars would not have been waged.

The road to peace pointed out by Mr. Dulles may help in a few cases in the future. But his idea could be applied only to selected cases. Dictators and war lords cannot be handled my persuasion and sweet reasonableness, by "world sentiment for peace." While we have these militarists, wars of conquest are inevitable as long as there are weaker victims to be attacked—unless the League of Nations or some other organization enforces upon these warmakers respect for the lives and property of peoples not effectively armed or less numerous than the aggressors.

The context perhaps indicates that Mr. Dulles is thinking primarily of Europe, but how can he when one of history's biggest conquests is going on under his eyes in the Orient—the Japanese extension of their conquest of 30,000,000 Chinese to another 100,000,000 or so? As Korea shows, Japan governs by terrorization. The system is epitomized in the statement of a former governor general of Korea: "Korea can't govern herself; every Korean capable of participating in government is either in prison or in exile." Only the utmost credulity in swallowing Japanese propaganda could make one think this conquest of China an "inevitable change." Again, the "inevitable" war is the future revolt of the Chinese against their arrogant masters.

Mr. Dulles proposes an idea which may be helpful in some cases in Europe; he seems utterly to overlook the more important task of holding in check the conquerors who are creating now the "inevitable" revolts of the future, the conquerors who preach war as the highest virtue and despise peace as "slave ethics."

T. A. B. BAREFOOT.
Washington, Oct. 11.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: It is easy just now for anyone with an isolationist obsession to cater to mass thinking and popular applause; to absorb a comfortable knight-in-shining-armor complex. Then comes dismay when one's predictions miss the mark by a wide margin, and the I-told-you-so attitude becomes impossible.

No one in this country wants war. But a Pharisaical holier-than-thou attitude is the very pose that will jeopardize peace. And if in spite of such a pose peace prevails, thanks to the League, we shall have some point in common with the Levite who looked upon the victim and "passed by on the other side."

H de JERSEY.
Washington, Oct. 12.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: I have noticed cartoons in the newspapers, read columns after columns, and have heard radio addresses several times a week, all striving for the same goal, "Keep Out of European Affairs." But I wonder if we should?

We have refused to enter the League of Nations, time and again, not only when the peace of the world was threatened in Europe, but also a few years ago when China's rights were violated by Japan. Great Britain at that time tried to bear pressure against the aggressor, but failed. Why? Because it took the League too long to act.

We did not take any action, individual, or jointly with any nation, and the League of Nations needed our co-operation in order to help China safeguard what was justly hers. And while all these diplomatic formalities were in progress, so was the Japanese army, and what was the result? The Manchukuo government was established, and today the Japanese flag flies in the breeze. We all felt sorry for the Chinese, but that was as far as it went. I feel confident that if the United States had been a member of the League at that time China's rights would have been respected.

A. J. BUTLER.
Washington, Oct. 9.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: A letter published in your paper October 11 from a correspondent whose cloak of anonymity is "Bophocles," attempts to see a solution for the Italo-Ethiopian dispute if the United States were to back the League of Nations with might and main. Your esteemed contemporary, the New York Times, in its issue of the same date, contains a letter from former Secretary of State Stimson on the effectiveness of the neutrality resolution passed by the last Congress and its corollary executive proclamation.

It was no doubt the intent of Congress to prevent the United States from becoming entangled in a possible future European war. If so, then why did the President limit the list of prohibited articles strictly to such "implements of war" as are used solely in carrying on actual warfare? Mr. Stimson points out that "orders placed here by Italian or Ethiopian buyers will be accepted in spite of the Presidential neutrality proclamation." Like vultures scenting carrion the "money changers" are waiting to batten on the exigencies of the belligerents. The situation seems created especially for them!

Italy's invasion of Ethiopia has released an irresistible force, but Mussolini is most anxious to keep its momentum within normal bounds. It is not too late for the League to prevent that force from overflowing in harmful directions. The United States, as the only first-rate power not a member of the League, has the opportunity of making its voice heard in no uncertain terms instead of the bungling and weak attitude expressed in the neutrality resolution.

GUY d'AULBY.

The Post Impressionist

Number 10, Downing St.

Post Office, Tuesday.

"THE Cabinet," say the London dispatches, "met at No. 10 Downing street"—and there debated a way to another grave decision for the future of the Empire.

Of course, the British Cabinet met there: No. 10 Downing street is the British Cabinet's accustomed meeting place. On that still recent day when the Cabinet completed the charting of its country's course for the present Geneva voyage, No. 10 began its third century of life as a governmental institution. Yet the Post-Impressionist, for one, seldom hears it thus mentioned—seldom evokes a memory of the place—without a sense of marvel at its simplicity.

Buckingham Palace is the metropolitan residence of Britain's sovereign, as Whitehall used to be. The Guildhall is the formal seat of the British capital's lord mayor. But a little, ill-built house, known solely by its number in an undistinguished street, remains the official home of Britain's changing premiers.

Worse than simple—mean, indeed, and in more senses than a few—were the origins of not alone this Westminster by-way, but of those of its building which still survive from its early days.

Except for its preservation by No. 10—and perhaps by No. 11, since 1805 the address of the Chancellor of the Exchequer—the name of Downing is now kept alive only by Downing College at Cambridge. But the college, though founded by a grandson and namesake of the builder of the street, arose from a gift which did not become effective until after its donor's demise. One of his contemporaries described this second Sir George as leading a "most miserable, covetous and sordid existence." Death, however, prevented him from insisting upon jerrybuilding at the university, whereas his predecessor personally administered the Works Propect of Downing Street.

Avarice, servility and treachery are the three qualities to which Samuel Pepys attributes the success of "realtor" Downing. As he thrived during the puritanic Commonwealth, so he got on monstrous well with the Restoration: from both Cromwell and Charles II, this Sir George took grist for his mill. The construction of Downing street and its houses must have ranked among the most remunerative of his speculations.

No. 10, advertised at first as fit "for persons of honor and quality," had to be partially rebuilt under King George I. During the reign of George III, one of its mistresses complained that, even so, the place was always trying to fall down—and in our own era, the wife of another premier adequately described it as externally "liver-colored and squalid" and internally "inconvenient, with three poor stairways."

King George II started it upon its governmental road.

In 1731, he offered it to the elder Walpole. That Earl of Orford, who was never distinguished for refusing anything, accepted the place, but not, oddly enough, for himself alone: he took it in his official capacity and intended that it should descend to his official successors. He was just then First Lord of the Treasury; Downing street lay nearer to the Treasury than St. James Square, where Walpole lived. So, in 1735 the Treasury's administartor nominated No. 10 as the permanent headquarters for every First Lord.

The premiers came a little later.

Yet what subsequent event in British school histories has not either been born behind those brownish walls or left a record in the council, or cabinet, room on that ground floor?

Here Lord North hid when the Gordon riots surged through the neighboring thoroughfares and finally foamed up to the very door of No. 10. Here, too, he is said to have been given the news of the surrender of Cornwallis, receiving it "as he would have taken a ball in his breast, opening his arms and exclaiming wildly:

"'O, God! It is all over!'"

The story of No. 10 Downing street is the obvious story of England from 1735 until today.

Inside still tarries a remnant of the furniture which Walpole brought from St. James Square, and excellent it is. More lingers of the Victorian sort, hauled thither, presumably, by Byronic Palmerston, by conservative Salisbury and by Gladstone, far more liberal in his politics than in his taste for interior comfort and decoration. It is quite likely that, since the Post-Impressionist's days in England, a few pieces of modernistic house-art have been installed—by the lady of Asquith and Oxford. At all events, even these could not make the mixture worse in 1935 than it was in 1914.

Inconvenient—but the British people do not want their premiers to have an easy time.

Uncomfortable—but the British public mistrusts ease in the surroundings of its prime ministers.

Ugly—but there is something reliable about ugliness.

The influence of Cromwell has never yet been obliterated from the conscience of Britain.

Children's Hour Is Over.

New York, Oct. 14.

VERY early in their Administration President and Mrs. Roosevelt let it be understood that their children were free and independent citizens, with a right to their own opinions and personal responsibility for their own conduct. They were at liberty to oppose the child labor amendment, stay out after 10, carry matches, frequent bars or vote Republican if they wanted to. Assuming none of the responsibilities which go with the Presidency, they were to enjoy none of the privileges and immunities of the office and were not to be regarded as members of a royal family.

That being the case, it is not too early to suggest that the next time one of the Roosevelts' little boys who go tearing around the country with the outward appearance of grown-up men runs into a problem with a traffic cop the court treat the case strictly on its merits. The suggestion is overdue, if anything. It would be an excellent thing for all concerned, including the President himself, if, on that occasion, the arresting officer should lay it on the line exactly as he would in the case of the Forgotten Man, and the judge, taking into consideration the defendant's record, should give him six months in some jail, preferably one with a rock pile. This would relieve the President of the suspicion, which must be rather embarrassing by now, that the fix goes in automatically when his sons go crashing through the speed and traffic laws in their high-spirited motor cars.

• • • •

UP to this time it is impossible to doubt that the President's boys do receive much more lenient treatment on the President's account than they would if their old man were just a man with a job in a store.

This detracts something from the sincerity of the President's vaunted democracy and it certainly conflicts with the original understanding that each Roosevelt's life was his own row to hoe.

Notwithstanding the democracy of the country, there is always a popular feeling that a President's kids are entitled to a degree of special consideration. But the lingering adolescents of the Roosevelt family certainly have used up their share of privilege now, and from this time forward should be required to take their chances as private citizens when they are caught out of line.

It is hard to guess what can be the matter with these boys, anyway, for even if their father were just a nobody the rest of the country would have a right to demand that they conduct themselves with a decent regard for the safety of others. As sons of the President they have enjoyed a privileged position notwithstanding disclaimers, and their answer to that is to engage in a series of dangerous acts on the motor highways.

• • • •

BUT if the President meant what he said when he refused to be committed by any act or utterance of his sons, then no judge should feel any hesitancy about throwing the whole book at the defendant the next time a Roosevelt appears before the bar charged with speeding or smashing up a car in traffic. It is the natural instinct of all Americans when they get into trouble with the law to call up somebody who can fix things. A thousand tickets are torn up in the judge's chambers every day by this process, but most people who drive automobiles are warned by one experience of this kind and thereafter make a reasonable effort to behave, or at any rate not to be caught misbehaving.

It needn't embarrass a President that his son is sent to the jailhouse for slamming through a traffic light or kicking the gas pedal through the floorboards on the open road. That could hardly be regarded as an Administration error, and the fact that a President was big enough to let his own son take the consequences of his crazy driving would be regarded by most people as a measure of the President's size.

There is something very impudent not to say reckless about the record of the Roosevelt boys who have figured in traffic cases. Here is a country with an annual death list of 39,000 in automobile accidents trying earnestly to bring the figures down, and here are the sons of the No. 1 Citizen earning a joint reputation as irresponsibles of the open road.

Everybody has to grow up in time but the Roosevelt boys don't seem to realize that the children's hour is over.

Passion Play

By
William Lyon Phelps

THE most impressive acted drama I have ever seen anywhere is the Passion Play at Oberammergau; it affected me more deeply than the presentation of any play by Shakespeare, or than the acting of such artists as Salvini, Booth, Mansfield, Bernhardt, Duse, on the professional stage. This Passion Play is, of course, a lineal descendant of the Mediaeval Passion Plays or Mystery Plays of the Middle Ages. In those times only a few people could read, and it was not only desirable, but necessary, that they should learn of the central truth of the Christian religion by dramatic and mimetic presentation.

• • • •

Thus all over the continent of Europe, from about the year 1000 to about 16,000, these plays were very frequently given; they lasted all day, and represented dramatically the story of religion from the creation of the world to the Resurrection.

I do not believe that these plays should be given except with the utmost reverence; and they should not be advertised or produced commercially. Thus I should be sorry to have them imported and given in New York or Chicago.

But I have just learned of a Passion Play that is given in Nancy, France, and will continue throughout the month of October. This seems to be given with the religious sincerity and passionate earnestness characteristic of Oberammergau.

• • • •

No salaries are paid and no personal publicity is permitted. Every actor has a regular trade during the week, and plays only on Sunday. Mary is a stenographer; Pontius Pilate is a carpenter; the high priests are chauffeurs, watchmen, mechanics, etc.

The part of Christ is taken by a bookkeeper in a shoe factory; he is busy all day long weekdays in his affairs; he rehearses at night, and simply absorbs the New Testament story by constant reading.

There are 500 actors in the cast; they receive no money, and their names do not appear on the program. Even the man who takes the leading part never has his name in print; it is known to the inhabitants of Nancy and to those who witness the performance; but not outside.

The actors play with the same earnestness, I am told, that is so thrilling in Oberammergau. It is a religious exercise.

• • • •

About 2,000 persons can see the performance; the play lasts from 9 in the morning to 5:30 in the afternoon, with a lunch interval; as in Oberammergau.

Monday morning all the actors resume their daily tasks in the town.

"The Art of Patience"

French Diplomat Compares Headlong Rush Of Italy To Take Over Ethiopia With Lyautey's Deliberate Technique In Entering Morocco.

By Andre Vulliet.
Special Correspondence of The Post.

Paris.

"WARS are always in the making, but they do not break out so easily. Even in 1914, it took a lot of misfortunes, among which the assassination of Archduke Ferdinand of Austria, to provoke the World War. We can admit that Germany's pre-war policy was leading Europe right into it, but had not the fatal assassination taken place at Serajevo, the conflict would not have broken out in August, 1914, and nobody can tell what would then have happened in 1915. Diplomatic skies can get cloudy or bright in very rapid succession indeed."

The man who thus spoke in a soft tone, with a peasant's simplicity and a sensible judgment, was none other than Jules Cambon, one of the ablest diplomats the French Republic ever had. He was born in 1845 and those who have known him in his late retirement will tell you that his death means the passing away of almost a century of human experience and of 70 years of French political life.

He was sent to Washington in 1897, when the United States had just embarked upon the Spanish War and when the Panama Canal scandal was about to cause tension with France. He was instrumental in bringing about the revival of friendly relations between the United States and Spain and tactfully managed to get 200,000,000 francs from the United States Government for his country in the Panama Canal affair. "I received from President MacKinley and I held in my hands the largest check I ever saw in my life," he used to say.

"I spent all my life arranging and conciliating," he also used to say. "The role of a diplomat should not only consist of following the line of a great policy. He must conciliate and conclude transactions."

Of Clemenceau, who had put him in charge of Franco-American relations in 1918, he thought that "So far as the war was concerned, we must raise our hats at his memory. He succeeded. But what a pity that he negotiated the peace."

A few months before Cambon died, he had been invited to be the guest of honor at a banquet given by a Paris Franco-American association to celebrate his ninetieth birthday. Breaking his rule never to go out at night, he accepted, but only upon the condition that he would be taken home before 11 o'clock. "They don't seem to remember that I'm not a young man. They forget that I'm no longer 80," he commented.

• • • •

THAT the real spirit of diplomacy could save us from the possibility of another war evolving out of that Italo-Abyssinian affair by making formalism and force meet half way, was the idea developed a few days ago at the American Club in Paris by Wladimir d'Ormesson, a former French diplomat and now a widely read political writer.

"For diplomacy is the art of the possible. Diplomacy is the art of meeting contingencies; it is particularly the art of patience. Unfortunately, we live in an epoch where everybody seeks the impossible and no one wants to wait. One lives to the rhythm of the cinema, the radio. One screeches and yells. Press polemics are substituted for negotiations in chancelleries and paralyze them."

"It must be said also, because it is true, that dictatorial regimes scarcely lend themselves to the exercise of diplomacy. Diplomacy needs the shade. Dictators put themselves in the sun. Diplomacy needs time. Dictators are in a hurry."

"Even a colonial empire is created only by the miracles of diplomacy. For proof, I cite the work of one man, one of the greatest Frenchmen who ever lived, Marshal Lyautey. He made Morocco in a dozen years, using as much diplomatic genius as military science, and the world would be astonished if it knew with what limited military means he worked to achieve this tour de force, to seat French power in this corner of Africa."

• • • •

IT may be of interest to note that, according to the treaty of Algeciras, signed April 7, 1906, by the great powers, the political and territorial integrity of Morocco and the independence of the Moroccan Sultan were preserved. All France was granted officially was a right to organize the police in the Moroccan ports, together with Spain and under the supervision of a Swiss general inspector, and the recognition of her "special rights." There is ample food for thought in comparing what the French got at the beginning in Morocco and what they have now.

Il Duce did not accept what both the French and the British were ready to let him have in Abyssinia two months ago in Paris, which in reality amounted to much more than what the French were given in Morocco in 1906. It may be that he had little use for a method of penetration that required time. But his blunt refusal was also grounded on the conviction, often expressed in Italy, that if the Italians went there with the French and English they would inevitably be done for. Behind their bravado may have been a touch of inferiority complex.

FOLLOWING the development of the European situation is really an impossible task. When you ask those who are supposed to be in the know, or who ought to be, at least, you are amazed to see how little they do know. It has been quite apparent during the Geneva talks. The same politician would express pessimism, optimism, indifference or enthusiasm, according to the latest news. A hand to mouth policy. Diplomacy at random!

Is there a great European nation today that really knows what is in the back of its mind? Has any got a policy that could unfalteringly be carried through by generations of diplomats and statesmen, as was the case in turn for France, for Great Britain and for Germany? Mussolini, no doubt, is unflinchingly fighting for the grandeur of Italy and Fascism. But is he certain of the road he should follow to get there? He has sought friendships in quick succession from practically all the European nations, except Yugoslavia and, perhaps, Czechoslovakia. Was it a good system?

AS to democracies, they make it just as hard for real diplomacy "In our democracies," as Andre Maurois, noted French writer, wrote sometime ago in Le Figaro, "the man in the street judges without appeal and the British ministers tell us that they are guided by public opinion. But is the man in the street informed? Can he be?

"The man of 1935 knows a lot less about the affairs of the world than the man of 1235. The man of the Middle Ages had to know the affairs of his corporation, of his city, and he knew them well enough. The modern man wants to have an opinion about Russia, about the New Deal, about Japan's policy, of which he knows nothing. Note the aggressive authority with which the least informed woman judges a nation's policy or any army's strength. Chats without importance. But it is the sum of such unimportant chats that make almighty public opinion."

"It must be the sand man—he just put papa to sleep!"

At Aduwa

By Alice Gould

(With Acknowledgment To Southey.)

It was an autumn evening,
Old Tony's work was done;
And he before his barber shop
Was sitting in the sun;
And there beside her grandpapa
Was playing small Angelica.

She saw her brother Enrico
Returning from his route—
He'd gone his rounds with newspapers
And had one left to boot;
He pondered what its headlines told
That were so big and black and bold.

Old Tony took it from the boy
Who stood expectant by;
And then the old man shook his head,
And with a natural sigh,
'Tis all about the dead, said he,
Who fell in the great victory.

Now tell us what 'tis all about,
Young Enrico he cries,
And small Angelica looks up
With wonder-waiting eyes;
Now tell us all about the war,
And what they kill each other for.

Why, the Italians, Tony cried,
Have captured Aduwa;
They have big fam'lies, so they need
All Ethiopia;
And many triumphs there must be
Just like this glorious victory.

With bombing planes the country round
Was wasted far and wide,
And many a child and mother, then,
And old civilians, died;
But things like that, you know must be
At every famous victory.

It must have been a shocking sight
After the town was won,
To see those anguished bodies there
Lie writhing in the sun;
But things like that, you know, must be
After a famous victory.

And all will praise the victors now
With Bravo and Huzza!
Why 'twas a very wicked thing!
Said small Angelica.
Nay, nay, my little girl, quoth he,
It was a wondrous victory.

So praise to him who won the fight—
Il Duce Benito!
But what will come of it at last?
Quoth little Enrico.
Why, that I cannot tell, said he,
But 'twas a glorious victory.

The Business Census.

("A census of the country's business is being taken by the Department of Commerce, employing some 35,000 persons."—News item.)

"Good morning. I'm taking a census of business."

"A what?"

"A census of business. The Government is anxious to find out just what conditions are."

"So am I!"

• • • •

"What's the name of this business?"

"It's been so long since I've had any inquiries that I've forgotten. But I'll look it up for you in a moment."

"How old is it?"

"About ten years."

"It looks older than that."

"I know, but look what it's been through in the last six years!"

• • • •

"Has it had any major operations recently?"

"I think so. All those Government surgeons couldn't have been hanging around here for nothing."

"Has it ever had diphtheria, rickets, smallpox, pneumonia, rheumatism or acidosis?"

"My friend, if you can think of anything that hasn't been the matter with this business of late, let me know."

• • • •

"When did you last take it to a doctor?"

"I haven't had to take it to a doctor. Washington has been sending the doctors here."

"Is this a corporation or a privately owned enterprise?"

"I won't know until I've studied the new tax bill more and consulted my attorneys."

"What was your net profit last year?"

"Young man, this is no time for joking."

• • • •

"Can you give me the amount of business done by you in 1933 and 1934, roughly speaking?"

"Roughly speaking is the only way I could possibly refer to it."

• • • •

"What is the condition of your plant?"

"It ought to be good; it's had a wonderful rest."

"Do you plan any new equipment in the near future?"

"I've hardly used the equipment we have."

• • • •

"Have you noticed any improvement in the last few months?"

"Yes. Anything that happened would have had to be an improvement."

"What reports do you get from your sales force around the country?"

"He's pretty optimistic."

• • • •

"Do you consider that a substantial business recovery is under way?"

"It must be. We had two telephone calls last week and neither one was a wrong number."

"Mr. and Mrs. Herbert Blank, of Navy street announce the engagement of their daughter, Miss Margaret Blank to Michael R. Mouse."—Greenfield Gazette.

With Walt Disney as best man?

Fantasia.

One time I had a purple pig,
With lovely pea green spots all over.
I taught him how to dance a jig,
And fed him cake and four-leaf clover.

His eyes were like two rubies red;
His ears were like twin flags unfurled;
Of thistledown he made his bed;
His tail in little spirals curled.

He was the joy of all beholders;
At every fair he was a winner. . . .
One day when I was feeling sad
I had that little pig for dinner.

That night I very nearly died,
I tossed and screamed the whole night thru—
I dreamed I'd seen an auto tag
Which read like this: "U-812!"

WHAT IS MEANT BY
8th WOMAN

One word explains her confidence

You probably know at least one woman who is never at a disadvantage, never breaks engagements, never declines dances (unless she wants to!) and whose spirits never seem to droop.

If you'd ask her, how she does it, you'd probably find she is that eighth woman who relies on Midol. Eight million women once suffered regularly every month. Had difficult days when they must save themselves and favor themselves, or pay the penalty. But a million have accepted the relief of Midol.

Why be a regular martyr to pain month after month? Compelled to favor yourself and save yourself on certain days.

Midol is effective even when the pain has caught you unaware and has reached its height. It's effective for hours, so two tablets should see you through your worst day. They do not contain any narcotic.

ALICE FAYE was offered the lead in George White's "Scandals," but her flicker contract won't allow her to take it . . . Carl Laemmle always shouts, "hooray," when he wins at the Colony Club . . . An actor who has been out of work was stopping with a noted actor and actress, recently divorced . . . The unemployed actor had a luxurious room, all his meals, and was always entertained. He is now back on Vine street. "I couldn't stand the place," he says. "I had to move out of the guest room" . . . "I realize," said Jones, "that you're now paying me ten times more than I'm worth, but I want a raise. I want 15 times more than I'm worth" . . . We got our start by buying our OWN home...

I shall always remember how we got started. We had a few hundred dollars when we were married, then we saved for two or three years. Then the children came along and, try as we would, we had all we could manage to pay our rent every month and buy the things our little family needed to live on.

Then we bought our own home. We used our savings as a down payment, and then every month our rent was a payment to the co-operative bank. It seemed like no time at all until the house was paid for.

After that we put our rent money in the bank every month. My advice to all young married couples is—own your own home.

A Tale of Youthful Valor Is Revealed on Belasco Screen in "Born for Glory"

Film Glorifies British Naval Establishment

Reaches Thrilling Climax; Fox's "Sneak" Preview; Amusement Notes.

Reprinted From Yesterday's Last Edition.

By Nelson B. Bell.

"BORN FOR GLORY." Gaumont British picturization of a story of the Imperial British Navy in action, featuring Betty Balfour, Barry Mackay and John Mills, with Jimmy Hanley, Howard Marion-Crawford, H. G. Stoker, Percy Walsh, George Merritt and Cyril Smith. Directed by Walter Forde. Released Saturday afternoon.

Based upon one of those incidents of personal heroism that crop out of every war, "Born for Glory" provides an interval of fast-moving, thrilling and, at times, inspiring entertainment.

Primarily designed to pay an obvious tribute to the intelligence, fidelity and valor of the officers and men of the British navy, this production goes further and affords an interesting demonstration of the dramatic value of the ponderous machinery in the bowels of a battle cruiser and the part that mechanics can be made to play in the furtherance of a melodramatic plot.

The action has its inception in the year 1893, when a collision of a hansom cab and a four-wheeler on the streets of London throw together a dashing young naval officer and a beautiful young woman.

True to the tradition of all navies, they are separated by admiralty orders, and a treasured watch, presented to the young officer's grandfather by Lord Nelson, is left in the young woman's keeping as an earnest of her lover's early return to claim her hand. But he never returns.

Rears Son to Sea.

Wed to the sea by tradition as well as personal attachment, Elizabeth Brown rears her son for service of his country afloat. He is assigned, finally, to H. M. S. Rutland, an antiquated old cruiser plying the fringes of the world, and is aboard her in the South Seas when war breaks out as a result of the tragic act at Sarajevo, Serbia, in the summer of 1914.

His ship is ordered by radio to join a first-line cruiser and, the rendezvous accomplished, to find and destroy the German raider Zeithen, playing havoc with the nitrate shipments intended for the allies.

The Rutland encounters the enemy before contacting the larger battle wagon and is destroyed—but not until a final shot fired by the youthful Albert Brown has put a hole in the Zeithen's hull just above the water line.

Picked up by the Germans, Albert is confined as a prisoner in the hospital ward. Realizing that if the Zeithen can be held for 24 hours in the harbor hideout it has chosen, it can be overhauled by the other British ship rushing to the scene, he makes his escape to the rocky coast with a rifle and packet of ammunition, resolves himself into a one-man squad of sharpshooters and picks the German seamen off, one by one, as they attempt to place the new plates on the Zeithen's wounded side. To dislodge him, the German commander turns loose his heavy guns on the precipitous shore and blasts a mountainside into gravel. The sound of his guns attracts the approaching British cruiser and the Zeithen is sunk.

Watch Tells Tragic Tale.

When the British commander is apprised by the German captain that one callow youth had wrought all the havoc to the ship, he is presented also with the belongings removed from the body of the dead hero. Among them is the watch given years before to the boy's mother. And so the picture ends.

However the social transgressions established by implication in the early sequences may be construed, the story's major purpose is sound and its development marked by a comprehensive and valuable outline of the full course of physical and mental training undergone by those who man the British battle fleet.

Added effectiveness is lent the play's climaxes by the depiction of the comradeship existing between the men of the British and German navies prior to that fateful August in 1914 when the world burst into flame.

As already intimated, the cooperation of the British admiralty in the making of the picture—much as the United States Navy participated in the filming of "Shipmates Forever"—has made possible authentic views aboard modern fighting vessels that tremendously multiply the realism of the pivotal scenes. The sea battle is simulated with remarkably realistic effect.

Not Without Flaws.

There are, to be sure, certain minor lapses in the logic of the narrative's development, but they are neither flagrant nor vital. For instance, Albert's escape from the Zeithen is, perhaps, a matter of too little hazard and his marksmanship from the sheer cliffs a little too sure, but these both are failures on the side of virtue.

Betty Balfour, as the mother; John Mills, in the heroic role of the savior of his country's cause in a remote incident of the war, and Barry Mackay, the officer who comes too late to the knowledge of his son's valorous deed, lead the cast with performances that are sympathetic and forceful—especially the juvenile Mr. Mills, who is vaguely the counterpart of Johnny Arledge's "Coxswain" in the aforemention "Shipmates Forever." The best supporting roles are those of Kapitan von Lutz and Max, of the Zeithen, played by Percy Walsh and Howard Marion-Crawford, respectively.

The supplementary program once again takes on imposing proportions. "Mother Ganges," a "Port o' Call" subject dealing with the Holy River and the City of Benares; a cartoon comedy, "A Modern Red Riding Hood;" "Armies of the World," a study of the armed forces of all nations in the "Adventures of a Newsreel Cameraman" series; Nick Lukas, Lew White, Herbert Rawlinson and David Ross, announcer, in an organlogue, and the Pathe News augment a feature of unusual vigor and timely interest.

Another item on the Belasco screen also is interesting. That would be the trailer announcing the next attraction—a British-made film version of Joseph Hergesheimer's novel of "Java Head," with Edmund Gwenn a prominent member of the cast headed by America's Anna May Wong. Miss Wong has not been seen on a local screen since "Chu Chin Chow," if my memory is on straight, as it sometimes isn't. Having achieved a great personal success on the American stage in "Laburnum Grove," it will be interesting to watch Mr. Gwenn's performance on the screen. The true revelation of his stature as an actor, however, will be made by Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer's picturization of the stage play, "The Bishop Misbehaves," when, as and if, that admirable picture comes along.

The Fox Flips a Frolic.

An innovation for Washington, but a trick commonly practiced on the West Coast, was inaugurated—or at least given a tentative whirl—last night at Loew's Fox Theater.

Without preliminary announcement or publicity of any kind—except Arch MacDonald's nebulous allusions over WJSV at about Sunday night supper time—a "sneak preview" of "It's in the Air," Jack Benny's first starring vehicle, was screened following the final projection of "Here's to Romance," the week's regular feature booking.

The last audience in attendance at the Fox last night was informed of the extra screening and invited to remain to see the Benny number without additional cost.

This is a device frequently resorted to out where pictures are made in order to get a quick and infallible "audience reaction" to the given subject.

Howja-Like-It Cards.

To further this purpose last night, 1,000 self-addressed postcards were distributed to the late audience for return to the Loew management with an expression of the spectator's opinion of the picture and any other remarks he or she might see fit to make. The result of this poll, necessarily, will have to be announced—if at all—at a later date.

Beyond the fact that "It's in the Air" is a Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer production, made from a story and screen play by Byron Morgan and Lew Lipton, directed by Charles F. "Chuck" Reisner, with Jack Benny, Ted Healy, Una Merkel and Nat Pendleton heading a cast that also includes Mary Carlisle, Grant Mitchell, Johnny Arthur, Purnell Pratt, Al Shean, Phillips Smalley, Howard Hickman, Harvey Stephens and many others of like standing, nothing is personally known of the film ny this writer at the moment these words are being set down.

These words are being set down, if it matters, some three hours before the preview is scheduled to begin.

More of this later.

The winners of the scholarships at the Studio of Theater Arts, Constance Connor Brown, director, for which open tryouts were held on both Saturday and Sunday afternoons, were won by Dorothy Bolton, of Clarendon, Va., and Norman Rose, a newcomer to Washington. The auditions were held in the studio school, at 1731 K street, and were participated in by 54 aspirants for stage careers. The awards embrace free tuition for any or all of the courses offered by the Studio of Theater Arts during its entire term of study, extending from October 15, 1935, to April 15, 1936.

Time to Hurry!

Katharine Cornell's first appearance in Shakespeare in Washington will occur tonight when she acts and presents "Romeo and Juliet" in the National Theater for the first time.

Florence Reed will be seen as the nurse, Maurice Evans as Romeo, Ralph Richardson as Mercutio and Charles Waldron as Friar Lawrence.

Playgoers are urged to note the necessity of being in their seats before the first curtain at 8:15 sharp at nights, and 2:15 sharp at the Wednesday and Saturday matinees, as the first intermission does not come until 9:20 at night and 3:20 in the afternoon.

Although the advance sale here is heavy, it is announced by the management that there are seats to be obtained for all performances this week at the National, despite the rumor that the theater is entirely sold out for the week. It probably will be, but it is not up to the present moment.

Word-to-the-Wise Note.

So, if you hurry, there is a chance to enjoy this priceless jewel yet!

Conquers Cruiser Single-Handed

This is ordinary seaman Albert Brown, who armed himself with a rifle and a plentiful supply of ammunition and then held a German armored cruiser at bay until one of His Majesty's first-line battle wagons could come up and sink the enemy craft. This would be the crux of the matter set forth on the screen of the Belasco Theater in "Born for Glory," the Gaumont British production now on view. The incident, of course, would be one that took place early in the Great War 'way down in the South Seas.

Gayety

"CHIANTI GIRLS." Independent Burlesque Association production in two acts and 25 scenes, featuring Pinto and Della and the Carroll Sisters, with Don Dixon, Bert Grant, Lester Mack, Eddie Cassell, Billy Elliott, Rae Shattack, Dolly Hendricks, Gladys Fox, Gay LaBarr and the Dancing Bryanettes. Book by Gus Flaig. Dances routined by Fran Bryant. Staged by James J. Lake. Reviewed Sunday matinee by W. A. Whitney.

Following such an all-round satisfying production as last week's, any show this week would be hard pressed to reveal anything more than routine merit. Thus, "Chianti Girls" becomes the partial victim of circumstances not entirely of its own making.

While this particular show does suffer from the remembered excellence of its illustrious predecessor, it is deficient also on its own account notwithstanding the work of those inimitable "Wop" comedians, Jimmie Pinto and Matty Della, and well executed routines by the Dancing Bryanettes.

The blonde Jean and Joan Carroll, the baby-face brunette Gladys Fox and the titian Gay LaBarr, making her debut here, were generously applauded yesterday, for familiar antics.

They work hard and with enthusiasm, fulfilling the functions of the important cast.

Besides Pinto and Della, there are Eddie Cassell and the accordion-playing Don Dixon to add to the gayety of the occasion.

Bert Grant, Lester Mack and Tenor Billy Elliott also contribute their talents to the performance. Dolly Hendricks is the soubrette.

Patrol Policeman Asked to Resign

Scored School Buses Over Tags, Causing Mixup.

Special Dispatch to The Post.

Fredericksburg, Va., Oct. 14.—Sam Redding, member of the State motor patrol force, assigned to this territory for the last six years, has been asked to resign and turn in his equipment, according to information received this morning from headquarters of the State motor vehicle department ni Richmond.

Officer Redding had been under suspension while charges against him preferred by J. H. Chiles, superintendent of Spotsylvania County schools, were investigated.

Reddings dismissal followed his action in removing tags from two Spotsylvania County buses and ordering the drivers not to use the buses until propert tags were obtained. The action, it was said, disrupted classes at two schools and caused 28 children at Belmont High School to walk home. Redding charged that the buses were operating on "T" tags when they should have had "For hire" licenses. The buses are now being used without licenses, it was said, by order of investigators of the motor vehicle department.

The Burden of a Nation

By Felix Bruner

Five billion dollars for relief! This appropriation by the new Seventy fourth Congress on demand of the Roosevelt Administration stunned economists and stretched the imagination of the country's taxpayers. It was unprecedented in peace time. Who was to spend it? The Administration set up an elaborate organization in Washington with Harry Hopkins at its head. How was it to be spent? The Administration provided regulations dividing the funds between labor (for relief) and materials. But a further and more vital question was asked. What are the results? The Post, realizing the importance of this question, sent Felix Bruner, a member of its national news staff and seasoned investigator, out into the Nation—into city alleys and country byways—to find out. This is the third of his dispatches.

By Felix Bruner.

White Plains, N. Y., Oct. 14.

Twenty miles north of Forty-second street, New York, the unemployment relief situation changes abruptly. While Works Progress Administration money has been pouring into the city, Westchester County, with its 520,000 population, of whom 67,000 are on relief, still has not received a cent of the $4,880,000,000 appropriation.

While New York City unemployed are organizing, demanding higher wages and shorter hours, the unemployed of this community are looking for work and except in rare instances, meaning it. New York City is the show place for the relief program. People in this community, watching the goings-on next door, feel that they have been forgotten.

It isn't that there is a lack of ways of putting people to work under the WPA. Westchester County has submitted to the WPA in Washington 500 projects, to cost altogether $10,000,000. It is just that Washington hasn't yet got around to doing anything about it. In fact, the program in New York, outside the city, has been getting under way very slowly.

Has Local Bureau.

Westchester County has a local work relief bureau which has been functioning since November, 1931. During that time it has handled CWA projects, FERA projects, and State and local projects. Altogether it has completed about 1,500 projects, costing $10,000,000. It was this organization that got together the 500 jobs submitted to Washington, through the State organization for approval. But now it appears that the local organization will be ignored in favor of new and inexperienced appointees. A similar situation is said to exist in a number of other localities in New York. A charge that the Administration is "playing politics" with the relief money is frequently heard.

The WPA has set up its own organization paralleling that of the community and has failed to take advantage of the community's experience, it is charged. Agencies already in existence are being scrapped. The local organization in Westchester County has improved hundreds of miles of highways, constructed 18 athletic fields, built seawalls, dredged streams, built bridges, sewers and dams. It has employed white-collar workers on mapping, indexing, surveys and scores of other kinds of jobs. Officials say they have never been at a loss to find work for this type of relief employe. In the past the Government has contributed 50 cents in every dollar of the cost of these projects, the State 25 cents and the county 25 cents.

Supervision Is Problem.

As an instance of difficulty in dealing with the WPA, one New York county sent in a group of projects. The WPA declared that the Government must name its own timekeepers and foremen. When arrangements were made for this, the rule was changed and the community was permitted to do so. In New York City and elsewhere the problem of supervision seems to be a serious one. Hundreds, sometimes thousands, of relief workers have been turned loose on jobs without proper supervision, according to complaints that have been registered at State and national headquarters. One instance was reported in which well-meaning relief workers, sent to clear up some park property, dug up hundreds of expensive shrubs that had been planted by a previous group of relief workers.

"There is much talk about maintaining the morale of relief workers," one person of long experience in handling this kind of problem said. "You are not going to do it unless you insist on keeping relief work up to the normal standards of private employment. Work relief will be no better than the dole, and probably worse, if workers are given to understand they are expected to soldier on the job. In too many instances relief workers are only pretending to work."

Load Takes Big Jump.

This county represents a cross-section of population from the very rich to the very poor. At one time, one-sixth of the population was on relief. The enormous growth of the relief problem—an experience similar to that of nearly every other community in the country—is indicated by the fact that Westchester County spent $141,591 for relief in 1928, as compared with $8,910,867 spent for the same purpose in the county in 1934. The load has increased 62.9 times. During the first six months of this year, it increased even more, with expenditure of $5,855,870.

These figures are quoted because they are typical of conditions and because they demonstrate vividly the relief problem in a community that has no peculiar difficulties but which is meeting just an average situation. There are indications now, however, that the load is becoming somewhat lighter, with improving conditions. More people are going off relief rolls because they are getting jobs. But there is no indication that the problem will be solved, or a solution even approached, when the present Federal appropriation is spent. Nobody appears to have the remotest idea of how "this business of relief" can be ended.

The WPA is looked upon generally as simply a repetition of the civil works program which in 1933 put a total of 4,000,000 people to work for a short time. However, one person who has been close to the situation here said, "We don't know yet what WPA is."

Friendly to PWA.

While the PWA is looked upon with some misgivings, the Public Works Administration gets a more friendly reception, but it is not considered a serious factor in reducing unemployment.

"It's as slow as molasses in January," said a relief worker. "If we had depended on the PWA all our relief people would be dead from starvation."

For instance, plans had been drawn for years for an addition to a hospital, to cost $1,800,000. They were submitted to Washington. It was two years before they went through the entire process of being approved and money became available. But the work is now going on.

One of the things that is seriously worrying this community is the plan to abandon transient camps. There is one here, housing about 250 men. The people want to know what is to become of them if the shelter is closed, not necessarily what is to become of them for a few months during which they might be given jobs, but whether many of them are to become a burden on the community.

No Union Troubles.

There naturally is no labor organization problem, no problem of how many hours should constitute a month's work, or what constitutes a security wage. If Westchester County is to have these problems they still are in the future. What it wants now is some Federal money with which to begin work.

Its 500 projects, out of which it hopes the Government will select enough to put its people to work, involve an average cost of $11,000. The average cost per man per year is well under $900. It is believed that at least a majority of them meet all the requirements.

What the people here want to know is: "When is Washington going to get around to doing something about them?"

U. S. Assistance Needed In Glider Development

Big Meadows, Va., Oct. 14 (AP).—Lieut. Joseph W. Koch, U. S. A., today said the Soaring Society of America's third Big Meadows meet held here has proved that governmental support of American glider pilots' efforts will be necessary if they are to keep abreast of motorless flight developments in foreign countries.

Not more than half a dozen gliders were brought to the competition, and it was Lieut. Koch's belief the Government might take a hand in remedying the situation. Money troubles kept some pilots away and purses were made up at the field to bring several participants here.

WE GROW HAIR

THE above pictures of Thomas client Leo Stack show how Thomas re-grows hair even in extremely serious cases of baldness. This is an "alopecia areata" case and is considered unusually baffling by most authorities. The Thomas' have hundreds of such cases each year and have consistently, without a single failure, re-grown hair.

Loss of hair due to dandruff may make you just as bald as loss of hair from alopecia areata, or from any of the other 14 local scalp ills. Regardless as to the cause of your hair-loss, you must have highly specialized knowledge and treatment applied if you are to expect satisfactory results. The Thomas know how to treat effectively all of the 14 local causes of baldness. They know how to end dandruff, how to stop falling hair, and how to promote hair growth on thin and bald spots.

Hair Is Curled In Short Order By New Device

Roll and Pin Method Is Simple and Does Its Work Instantly.

By Ruth Anne Davis.

THE MOST startling discovery in the beauty mart for ages is the new curler which curls instantly without heat. And—curls either dry or wet hair!

Strictly speaking the new curling marvel is known as the roll-n-pin curler because you just roll and pin and, pronto, your hair is curled.

You know how awful must hair look when it's growing out. There's a certain straggly era when it seems there's no way to groom it. However, with one of the new curlers you can keep your coiffure looking like it's the latest creation of some hair-dressing artist.

It's no trouble, either. You simply insert the wet or dry hair between the metal and bar. Spring tension holds the hair firmly, allowing it to be rolled from the very end no matter how wiry it is.

Next, after rolling the hair, insert a bobby pin from underneath. The curler is arranged so that small grooves on either side make this step easy as pie.

Now, remove the metal section of the curler and then the wooden bar and there you are with as neat and round and smooth as curl as you ever saw.

The curlers come in a set of two sizes, one for large curls for long bobs and long hair, and one for small curls for short ends or outgrown shingles. Both sizes for $1.50, or one curler for $1.

Informal Evening Gloves.

THERE'S an air of elegant informality about the new chic six-button length evening gloves displayed in an F street shop. The contrasting bows of gold or silver kid on the tucked cuffs give them a straight-from-Paris effect.

These gloves are not too formal for semiformal clothes, but at the same time formal enough for the most gorgeous evening creation. They are conveniently adaptable to a variety of costumes.

Lingerie Saver.

WHY NOT take out insurance on your lingerie and hosiery by buying a package of "Savarip."

Savarip does all its name implies. You put a bit of it in the rinse water, and, presto, your hose and lingerie are safe against fading, running and breaks.

After you've treated your hose in this manner you'll find they won't show rain spots.

Twenty-five cents a package, please.

Aristocrat of Cleansers.

IDEAL for tucking away in your desk drawer to give your face a hasty clean-up is the cream liquid known as the aristocrat of quick cleansers.

You spread a liberal portion over your face and immediately it goes after the surface dirt, chases that away and then starts on a drive against the waste matter clogging your pores. It's a cleanser that doesn't do things by halves. It really cleanses!

And what's more, it softens the skin and acts as a powder base, too. After you've cleansed your face with it and wiped the remainder away with a tissue you'll find a moist film remains. To this powder readily adheres and stays on for hours at a time.

Bottles of the cleanser are available at two prices, 60 cents and $1.

Pleasant HOMES

By Elizabeth MacRae Boykin.

WE'RE VERY sentimental about a dining room where the children do their lessons and all the family sits around after supper . . . that's how we spent our winter evenings growing up.

* * * *

H. M. S. WRITES: I have a painted floor in my dining room, with 9x12 rug. This is a room that is used a great deal for study and as a sitting room, so I'd like it as cheerful as possible during the winter. Could I have the baseboards painted the same color as the floor—dark green or brown, when the other woodwork is light? If I use a plain paper, would it be proper to use a flowered print or plaid material for draperies without glass curtains . . . this idea I like because we have a million-dollar view out of each window!

* * * *

ANSWER: Yes, I think it would be quite all right to have the baseboards painted the color of the floor. And a flowered or plaid material for draperies against a plain paper would be pretty to frame your grand view. You can dispense with the glass curtains if you like . . . though if you make them so that they tie back or draw back at the top, they won't interfere with the outlook and will at the same time give a softening effect to the window treatment.

Leader of Red Cross Drive in Capital Gets Results by Efficient Methods

Mrs. Johnston Directs Work of 100 or More Lieutenants.

By Dudley Harmon.

STATIONED in local banks and department stores this week is a group of 100 or so young women dressed in flowing veils and uniforms of varying hue, on the front of which is blazoned a large red cross.

These young women are here to add your name to the list of memberships in the Red Cross. They represent Washington's share in the national membership drive inaugurated by this organization every autumn.

In this local drive the young women play the part of lieutenants. The general, who for weeks ahead has planned the campaign, is Mrs. John A. Johnston, director of roll call and information for the District chapter of the Red Cross, and one of Washington's most outstanding volunteer social workers.

During the long summer days Mrs. Johnston has worked tirelessly to make this drive a success. Besides drilling her lieutenants, she is responsible for the distribution of thousands of application blanks throughout business and Government offices.

Experienced Social Worker.

Mrs. Johnston's experience as a social worker goes back as far as the World War, when she first began work as a volunteer. Since that time she has served first as volunteer secretary of the local chapter of the Red Cross, then as director of roll call. In the latter capacity she is responsible for maintaining and increasing local membership. Starting with very little, by hard work and systematization she has increased considerably the amount of money at the disposal of this organization. Each year she is responsible for collecting between $50,000 and $75,000, and so efficient are her methods that the cost per dollar of raising this money is usually small in proportion to the amount raised.

Mrs. Johnston renders yet another valuable service to the District Red Cross in that each year she prevails upon a local firm to give her chapter an office free of rent.

Intuition Correct.

A tragic telegram delivered during the World War was the immediate cause which drew Mrs. Johnston into social work.

The telegram announced the death of Mrs. Johnston's only son, serving overseas. However, the sad message left Mrs. Johnston unconvinced. Some deep intuition told her he was still alive, and she made a vow that if he were returned to her, she would devote the rest of her life to helping others.

Her intuition proved correct. The telegram was erroneous, and her son came home. Since that time, Mrs. Johnston has devoted the greater part of every day to her services for the Red Cross.

Outstanding among Washington's volunteer social workers is Mrs. John A. Johnston, above, who for years has directed the District of Columbia's annual membership roll call of the American Red Cross.

Many days find her at her desk in local headquarters from 9 to 5 o'clock. When castastrophe struck somewhere, when blinding dust storms or torrential floods left thousands homeless and without income, Mrs. Johnston toiled often far into the night, giving unsparingly of her time and energy.

During the World War Mrs. Johnston was a tireless canteen worker, frequently accompanying on their errands the trains which plied between New York and Washington to bring home the wounded from hospital ships. For many a returning invalid Mrs. Johnston made the trip as pleasant as possible under the circumstances, ministering to them physically and spiritually. She also served with the Washington canteens which supplied the soldiers with food and drink during the war. She has never worked in any other capacity than that of volunteer.

Mrs. Johnston is the wife of Gen. John Johnston, one-time Commissioner of the District.

Fashion's New Sweater and Skirt Combinations Are Popular Outfits for Women of All Ages

They Can Be Matched or Contrasted for That Casual Look.

By Amos Parrish.

NEW YORK, Oct. 14.—Exhilarating as autumn air are fashion's new sweater and skirt combinations. All ages are wearing them . . . and liking them! Have them match—or jumble them haphazardly together for that casual look that's so smart this fall.

The new sweaters come in breath-taking colors . . . a drab one is as out of the fashion picture as a last year's dress. There are the bright military colors like royal purple and vivid reds and blues . . . soft autumn shades of coppery rust and bronzy green and bright brown . . . subtle Renaissance colors, too; dull-ish purples, wine reds, rusts and deep greens and blues.

Scarfs, too, heed fashion's call to colors, and add a smart finishing touch to a sweater. Fashion likes little knitted cravats like the one sketched, and richly colored velveteeen ones, too.

Button-down-the-front skirts do not have to be yanked over the head, and can be zipped on and off in a jiffy. Points that count when she's trying to make that 9 o'clock class! So the button-down-the-front is aces in the college girl's eyes. We've sketched one of husky ribbed wool.

Fashion takes her Scotch straight these hearty days. And the bolder the plaid . . . the brighter the coloring, the smarter the skirt!

The button-down-the-back cardigan is something new under the fashion sun! The college girls began the idea—and now smart women everywhere are wearing their sweaters hind side foremost, or buying special button-down-the-back-ers.

The lady sketched at the right wears a button-down-the-back cardigan that can be turned round if she feels sensible instead of slightly giddy. The tweedy effect is achieved by knitting it with two strands, one red and one white. It's made of knitting and crochet cotton, and is soft as silk.

Scarfs, Heeding Call to Colors, Add Smart Finishing Touch.

The attached coupon, and requesten inclosures, will bring the directions round to your door. (Don't get the sweaters mixed. Directions are for the one sketched at the right.)

Varicose Veins Are Responsive To Injections

Physicians Report Good Results in About 75 per Cent of Cases.

By Dr. Irving S. Cutter.

VARICOSE veins cause not a little discomfort and disability and a reasonably high proportion of individuals past middle life show some slight enlargement of the superficial veins of the lower legs. Until recent years persons afflicted were compelled to resort to surgical procedures, to wearing elastic stockings, or to the daily application of bandages. Regardless of the type of treatment, ulceration occurred frequently.

We may well ask what causes varicose veins. In the first place, the return flow of blood to the heart from the extremities is relatively slow. It is accomplished by the contraction of the muscles, aided by the negative pressure in the chest. The veins in these areas are supplied with valves at various points that hold the blood and prevent its back flow, much as a dam in a stream will retain water for several miles above its location. If a valve is injured the column of blood pressing on a lower valve may be doubled. We must understand also that the superficial veins are not protected by muscles. Increased pressure in the abdomen is readily transmitted to the abdominal veins, and hence to those of the lower extremities. This is particularly true if the valves are not in perfect working order. Whenever one places undue pressure on the abdomen the valves of important leg veins may be injured. If an upper valve fails and the strain is continued or repeated, the valve next below may fail, until finally all the valves have been stretched beyond their power to function.

An early symptom of vein enlargement is the discoloration which often appears on the skin and which is due to the leakage of red blood cells into the tissues.

Discoloration Is Symptom.

Since 1911 much investigation has resulted in the development of a method of sclerosing or blocking these superficial, dilated veins. The object is to obliterate the veins as circulating channels and thus throw the return flow of venous blood into the deep, muscle protected veins of the legs.

Various solutions have been employed, the most acceptable of which possess sufficient irritating qualities to block the vein, but are not of enough toxicity to cause inflammation or systemic symptoms. Such solutions are sodium chloride and glucose, 40 per cent sodium salicylate, or 5 per cent sodium morrhuate. The injection is made into the vein by means of a fine hypodermic needle and from one to several cubic centimeters of the solution are used at each treatment. Great skill is required in introducing the fluid inside the vein.

The advantage of the method is that the patient may be up and about without serious interference with his regular activities, although the leg must be bandaged firmly for a considerable distance above and below the site of the injection.

Aids 75 Per Cent of Patients.

The plan has now been used for a sufficient length of time to permit an estimate of its value and it appears that the obliteration of the vein is successful in the majority of cases. There are some recurrences, however, and various authors report the formation of new swellings in 15 or more per cent of their patients. Or, to put it another way, good results may be anticipated in about 75 per cent of the cases.

As with most remedial measures, much depends on the general physical condition of the patient. Poor nutrition, anemia, kidney disease, and other factors are responsible for some failures. The method, however, offers so much relief in the majority of cases and is such an improvement over any previous plan that it should be employed if the case appears to be suitable.

Varicose ulcers will heal in most instances, provided the vein can be blocked with the sclerosing solution and an Unna paste boot applied to the entire lower leg. Under this management most ulcers will heal in from four to six weeks.

Ugly Women Best Subjects For Portraits

HOMELY WOMEN make the best subjects for portraits, believes Fernand Leger, French artist, who recently arrived in New York to attend an exhibition of his works.

"A painter should not try to reproduce a beautiful thing," he says, "but should make the painting itself a beautiful thing. For example, I have seen many beautiful women, but I have never seen a beautiful painting of a beautiful woman. But you can take an ugly woman and make a beautiful painting of her. It is the painting itself that should be beautiful."

Mr. Leger, who is one of the foremost of the French modernists, says America has no painters because it is a young civilization. In young races, he points out, painting and sculpture arrive last and literature and music come first. This country, he says, has "fine writers" and it has Negro music and jazz.

Child's Interests Served In Progressive Teaching

New Educational Method Teaches Pupils to Create Use of Information, Which They Gain by Memory Under Formal Process.

By Lenore K. Bartlett.

THE TERM "progressive education," has been used quite extensively in the last few years. Yet, because it may not be entirely clear to many readers, I am writing an open letter in response to the following letter which I have received, with the hope that my answer may serve to define the term.

* * * *

Dear Mrs. Bartlett: Several times recently I have heard the subject of progressive education mentioned, but my conception of it is rather vague. I would be interested in an exact definition of the idea and should appreciate it greatly if you would clear up this matter for me.

MR. A. B.

* * * *

DEAR MR. A. B: The main difference between the formal type of education and the newer progressive type is that the former program is built on academic lines whereas the progressive type follows more nearly the interests of the child. Academic progress is but one phase of his development. His individual interest is considered as well as his relationship with the group. The program of the progressive school is informal, experimental (that is, by and not with the children) and experiencing as to curriculum. Many of the so-called extra-curricular activities of the more formal schools motivate the regular school room program of the progressive school.

MRS. BARTLETT

More attention is given in progressive schools to the processes of learning and less to actual teaching.

Progressive schools vary in the degree in which they cater to the child's interest, but the academic program comes as a result of need on the part of the child to further his interests and not as unrelated material which he learns to respect or accept. As an example, we might take the school store run by a group of 8-year-olds in a progressive school in which I formerly taught. This store served a real purpose in the school because it relieved the office of dispensing school supplies. It served the whole school, as each class came there to purchase paper, pencils, paints, etc.

To perform this service, the children found it necessary to learn how to add and subtract quickly. They bought the supplies from a wholesaler and computed their profit, which was a legitimate compensation for their work.

In a group of younger children the subject of reading was introduced into their play and came as a natural outgrowth of it. These children were building a miniature city. There were stores in the city. These stores sold different food products which came from the nearby farms. The foods had to be labeled; but how do you write "corn" and "wheat" and "eggs" and "potatoes?" The words were written on the board when asked for and the child would then print the words himself. Thus reading is introduced to the young child.

In this way progressive schools inject the three "R's" as a part of the child's interest and thus create a use for the information which in the more formal schools is taught merely by the old-fashioned memory process.

Fashion Editor Omits College As Success Aid

A Degree Does Not Assure Chic and Style Sense, Mrs. Chase Says.

IN HER formula for success, Mrs. Edna Woolman Chase, editor of Vogue, does not include a college education.

Mrs. Chase is not a college graduate, and the majority of women on her staff did not go to college. Chic and style sense, according to Mrs. Chase, are no necessarily synonymous with a bachelor of arts degree.

"So many college girls have come to me about a position with fine minds inside their heads but unspeakable hats on top of them," Mrs. Chase recently said, "and in fashion work, one's taste in hats is equally, if not more, important than one's ability to grapple successfully with trigonometric problems and the philosophy of Socrates."

Mrs. Chase began with Vogue 30 years ago in the subscription department and became its editor in 1915. Besides being a synonym for de luxe smartness, she is widely known for her clever wit and executive ability.

In spite of the fact that Mrs. Chase believes a college education nonessential to success in her line, she is going to give college girls a chance to see what they can do in the field of fashion writing. Her magazine is sponsoring a contest among college graduates of 1936, the award to be a year's work in the Paris and New York offices of Vogue. A definite salary is attached and the winner will spend at least six months in the Paris office of Vogue, attending the famous openings of the great salons de couture and learning at their source how fashions are created. In New York, she will learn to report fashions and will gain a practical knowledge of American markets and methods of merchandising.

In recognition of her work in the interest of French art and fashions, Mrs. Chase was recently decorated by the French government.

3 More Women Win Prizes for Candy Recipes

Brittle, Neopolitan Bar, Apple Sweets Picked From Hundreds.

JUDGING the candy recipes last week was an almost endless task, for there were hundreds of interesting recipes submitted. Many good recipes were eliminated because of duplications, so if you didn't win a prize this time don't feel discouraged. You will have another opportunity starting today to win a weekly prize which will make you eligible for one of the three grand prizes. The new contest is described in detail elsewhere on the food page.

Miss Gertrude Drake, 1914 G street northwest, won first prize—a 5-pound box of Martha Washington candy—for her recipe for Victoria brittle. Second and third prizes, a 3 and 2-pound box of the same candy, were awarded to Mrs. M. A. Coleman, 2630 Adams Mill road northwest, for her recipe for Winchester apple candy, and to Miss Donna Lee Shirley, Bunker Hill, W. Va., for her recipe for Neopolitan bar.

Prize-Winning Recipes.

Prize-winning recipes follow, and other recipes which merited honorable mention are printed elsewhere on the food page.

Victoria Brittle (Almond Roca).

2 cups granulated sugar
¾ pound whole almonds
¼ pound butter
Bitter or sweet dipping chocolate (whichever you prefer) and ¾ pound of chopped, roasted almonds for topping

Cook sugar and butter to 237 degrees F., or until mixture becomes melted, stir constantly. Stir in almonds (blanched, but not roasted) and boil to 312 degrees F., or about three minutes longer, till mixture is a rich amber color.

The almonds roast and some will make popping sounds. Pour in well-buttered pans in a very thin layer, pull up from pan before entirely cold or the brittle will break.

When cool pour on melted chocolate, sprinkle with chopped roasted almonds and allow to harden, then turn over and repeat on other side. Break in pieces and store in tin (about ten days or two weeks) until softened and "short."

Winchester Apple Candy.

6 large apples
2 cups hot water
¾ cup sugar
2 tablespoons plain gelatin
6 tablespoons cold water
Vegetable coloring
Desired flavoring

Cut up the apples and cook until pulpy in the hot water. Strain through cheesecloth. Boil up the juice about 10 or 12 minutes, add the sugar and boil up again for about five minutes.

Now add the gelatin which has been dissolved in the cold water. Stir well, remove from fire. Add flavoring and coloring, for example: into half the amount add a few drops of red coloring and one-fourth teaspoon of raspberry flavoring; into the other half add a few drops of green coloring and a dash of peppermint flavoring.

Pour into a pan for cooling and cutting. This recipe will fill a pan 8 by 8 inches. Cut into small squares when cool and toss into powdered sugar.

Neopolitan Bar.

2 cups sugar
½ cup corn sirup
½ cup cold water
2 egg whites
Pink vegetable coloring
¼ teaspoon almond extract
1 cup candied or maraschino cherries
½ pound walnut meats
¼ teaspoon vanilla
¼ teaspoon lemon extract
2 squares chocolate
5 drops oil of peppermint
½ pound of almonds blanched and buttered
Chocolate to coat the bar

Boil the sugar, syrup and water until it reaches the medium hard-ball stage, then pour it gradually into the egg whites beaten stiff, beating constantly until creamy. Add pink coloring, cherries and almond extract. Drain cherries well before adding. Pour into a well buttered loaf pan.

Repeat the recipe, but add walnuts, vanilla and lemon extract. Place this white layer on the pink layer in the loaf tin. Repeat the recipe again and add melted chocolate, peppermint and almonds. Place the brown layer on the white. Set away to cool. Coat the top with melted chocolate.

Remove the entire loaf so that the pink layer will be on top and coat the rest of the loaf. Cut in slices, like brick ice cream. This makes 5 pounds of candy.

The secret of success with this candy is slow cooking.

Tapioca Prevents Leaking Of Pie Filling Juices

The addition of a small amount of quick cooking tapioca to the sugar and fruit mixture for a pie filling will keep the juices from leaking out of the shell or being absorbed by the lower crust. Two level tablespoons is the amount necessary for a 9-inch pie.

The filling will have a transparency not possible when cornstarch or flour is used as a thickening. The tapioca will not change the flavor of the fruit filling and will become transparent so that its presence can not be detected.

Wine Adds Zest to Baked Apples

Red eating apples baked with a bit of lemon juice and grated rind, sugar and domestic Muscatel wine attain a perfection of flavor and become a dessert of real distinction. The recipe is given in the accompanying story.

Reliable Apple Has New Role In This Sophisticated Recipe

Wound in Pastry Strips, Fruit Makes Ideal Heavy Dessert.

THE APPLE is one fruit that can be called upon to play any role, for its disguises are numerous and effective. Wound up in crisp pastry it makes an effective "heavy" dessert for a light meal. Sliced thin and fried in butter or bacon drippings it becomes a tempting accompaniment for breakfast bacon, roast duck or pork. Turned into apple sauce it becomes the delight of invalids and children.

The average housewife has her own special ways of preparing apples for breakfast, dinner and supper, but she always welcomes an introduction to a new apple recipe. Here is one that presents the apple in its most sophisticated role.

Apple Cordial.

4 red eating apples
Juice and grated rind of one-half lemon
½ cup domestic Muscatel wine
1 cup sugar
½ cup water
1 tablespoon butter

Wash and core the apples, slash skin four or five times from top of apple down half way. Place apples in a baking dish. Combine other ingredients in a saucepan and heat to the boiling point. Pour this sirup over the apples, cover baking dish and bake at 350 degrees F. (a moderate oven) until apples are tender. Baste the apples often with the juice in the dish.

Gelatin Glorified In Numerous Ways

Molded in Cups, It's an Attractive Dessert.

Plain gelatin can be glorified in many ways. Clear gelatin cubes can be made by molding gelatin in a shallow pan. When the gelatin is firm cut it into cubes and pile in sherbet glasses. Gelatin flakes are molded in the same way, but when the mixture is firm, break it into bits with a spoon or force it through a ricer. Serve these sparkling flakes in sherbet glasses, plain or in combination with fruit or whipped cream.

Clear gelatin molded in individual cups makes an attractive dessert when turned out on segments of orange, grapefruit or slices of pineapple.

Another interesting dessert can be made by filling sherbet glasses half full with clear liquid gelatine. When it hardens fill the glass to the top with gelatin cubes or flakes.

French Dressing.

Here is a faster way to make French dressing. Measure ingredients and place them in a screw-top jar. Be sure that the lid is screwed tightly in place and then shake the jar until the mixture forms an emulsion.

Household Hints

A smooth, rich chocolate sauce served either hot or cold atop a baked custard, a plain bread or tapioca pudding will add flavor and character to these simple desserts.

Crisp carrots that have been scraped and cut lengthwise into sticks afford a pleasant change when served in place of celery.

Creamed dried beef gravy can be varied by the addition of a few freshly cooked or leftover green peas.

Poached eggs embedded in a nest of spinach and garnished with grated cheese or a fine spray of paprika make an interesting beginning for a hot vegetable platter.

The temperature for baking chocolate cake is a little lower (about 25 degrees) than for plain cakes. Chocolate scorches easily because of its high fat content. For baking chocolate cake preheat your oven until the temperature reaches 325 degrees F. and try to keep this temperature during the entire baking time.

A glass mold used for making a gelatin dessert that is molded in layers will enable you to see that the layers are placed evenly and in the same width throughout.

Overcooking will cause cooked custard to curdle. When the mixture coats the spoon with which it is stirred it should be removed from the fire.

Tinted coconut adds a festive appearance to cake frostings. Sprinkle canned shredded coconut over a platter covered with waxed paper. Mix a little vegetable coloring to the desired shade with water. Mix the coloring through the coconut with a toothpick, taking care not to get the coconut too wet. Set to dry overnight before using.

Foods to be fried in deep hot fat, with the exception of foods like doughnuts, fritters, potatoes and fried breads, are dipped in an egg batter or egged and crumbed before frying. This coating becomes crisp in the hot fat, making a case about the food which keeps it from becoming soaked with fat.

Easily Served Cut Simplifies Formal Dinner

Beef Tenderloin, Lamb or Mutton Chops Are Good Suggestions.

By Dorothea Duncan.

THE woman who is just beginning her career as a hostess may have difficulty in the selection of the proper cut of meat for a formal dinner. Meat that is to be served for a formal dinner must be first a cut that can be attractively carved and easily served.

For a formal dinner the meat is usually carved in the kitchen into single portions and served from a large platter to each guest by the waitress or butler. The woman who is limited to one servant will find it much easier, then, if she selects a meat that does not have to be carved.

Beef tenderloin, loin lamb chops, or English mutton chops are excellent selections, for they can be cut by the butcher into individual servings. For flavor as well as decorative eqect beef tenderloin is wrapped with a strip of bacon which is secured during cooking by a meat skewer.

Wrap Chop With Bacon.

The loin lamb chop and the English mutton chop may be made more attractive by the addition of a lamb kidney placed in the center of the chop. The chop is then wrapped with bacon or fat back and the contour of the chop is preserved by the use of a large wooden meat skewer. The chops will be certain to hold their contour if the skewer is not removed after cooking, and a very decorative effect may be obtained by covering the protruding end of the skewer with a paper chop frill.

The woman who is not limited to one servant will find numerous other cuts of meat from which to choose for the formal dinner. The beef tenderloin may be used, but roasted in one piece rather than broiled in individual portions. The tenderloin will need the addition of fat to keep it from becoming dry or crusted during cooking. Fat back is the best selection of fat for the tenderloin wrapping.

After the meat is roasted it can be sliced in the kitchen and arranged on a platter decorated with sprigs of parsley, radish roses or flowers cut from raw beets and turnips.

Crown Roast of Lamb.

A crown roast of lamb, the cavity of which has been filled with ground shoulder of lamb, is also a delicious suggestion for the piece de resistance of a formal dinner. Each serving can be enhanced in appearance by the use of a chop frill on the protruding rib bone.

A saddle of real English mutton is a great delicacy and a roast especially suited to the formal dinner. Real English mutton is suggested because it is so far superior in flavor and quality to American mutton that there is no comparison.

The saddle of English mutton is filled with lamb kidneys and tied with cord into an attractive roast. No extra fat is needed for additional flavor. The meat is cut in strips along the saddle and each piece is served with the lamb kidneys on top.

Mixing Is Trick In Mayonnaise

All Ingredients of Dressing Should Be Measured Carefully.

A PERFECT mayonnaise dressing can be made easily at home by following simple directions accurately. All ingredients should be carefully measured before any two ingredients are combined. After measuring, mix the dry ingredients first. If the recipe calls for prepared mustard instead of powdered, mix this with the dry ingredients.

Place the dry ingredients in a mixing bowl and add the egg. Beat the mixture well with a rotary beater. Next add the oil gradually, by teaspoons at first, until one half cup is used, beating all the while. Now add part of the vinegar and beat in well. Then add more oil and continue beating. As the mixture thickens, thin it with both oil and vinegar until all of both are used. Continue beating after each addition of oil and vinegar.

The following proportion of ingredients will make a delicious mayonnaise dressing:

1 teaspoon prepared mustard
½ teaspoon salt
⅛ teaspoon pepper
⅛ teaspoon paprika
1 egg
2½ tablespoons cider vinegar
2 cups salad oil

From this foundation recipe you have a host of different dressings at your command, and all of them are easy to make. Simply add to the basic recipe, just before serving, other ingredients that will enhance the flavor of the salad to be served.

Tartar dressing for fish and artichoke salad, for example, can be prepared by adding to the basic recipe 3 tablespoons of chopped sour gherkins, 1 tablespoon capers, 1 tablespoon chopped parsley and 2 tablespoons chopped stuffed Spanish olives.

Molded chicken or jellied vegetable salad will be especially attractive served with mayonnaise to which have been added 1 chopped hard cooked egg, 1 tablespoon chopped pimiento and 2 tablespoons India relish.

Other variations can be worked out, the ingredients, of course, depending upon the combination of flavors of the salad to be served.

3 Grand Prizes To Be Awarded In New Recipe Competition

Winners of Six Weekly Contests to Be Eligible in Final Judging for Wooden Salad Bowl, Cake Server and Box and Dutch Oven.

POST food page readers have entered so enthusiastically into the previous recipe contests conducted by this department that they are being continued. The new contest which starts today will continue for six weeks. Every week a new contest subject will be announced and weekly prizes of $1 each will be awarded the five women submitting the best recipes.

The climax will be the awarding of three grand prizes. Any woman who wins a weekly prize will be eligible in the final judging for the grand prize awards.

Salad Bowl First Prize.

The three grand prizes have been selected for their attractiveness as well as their practicability. The first prize is a handsomely carved and brilliantly decorated wooden salad bowl, with matching wooden serving spoon and fork. The colors are resistant to vinegar and other salad ingredients and will remain intact through constant use. The bowl can be used for salads served at the table or as an effective background for fruit or vegetable centerpiece for the dining-room table.

The second prize is a combination cake server and box. The smartly designed tray is of nontarnishing chromium with bright red handles and the hood is of white porcelain crowned with a knob that matches the tray handles.

Dutch Oven Is Handy.

The third prize is a Dutch oven. This small portable oven can be used with great success for baking pies, cakes, pot roasts, custards, hot breads, etc., over one burner on top of the range. It can be used entirely in the place of an oven in a small apartment, or it can be used with just as good results when only one dish requires baking and it is impractical to light a large oven.

Begin immediately to place your name on the grand prize winning list by winning a weekly prize. Submit your favorite cake recipe to Dorothea Duncan in care of The Washington Post. All entries must be received not later than Saturday morning. The announcement of this week's winners will be made in next Tuesday's edition of The Post.

Delicious Coffee Made by Boiling

It's Clear and Fragrant When Prepared With Egg.

Boiled coffee can be just as delicious as coffee made by the percolated or drip method, if prepared by the following directions. The coffee pot must be scalded first. One heaping tablespoon of ground coffee and one teaspoon beaten egg should be used for each standard measuring cup of cold water. Boiled coffee made with an egg is golden, clear and deliciously fragrant.

Combine the coffee and egg in the pot and mix thoroughly. Then pour in the water and bring it slowly to a boil, stirring the coffee down occasionally. When the boiling point has been reached, remove the coffee from the fire immediately. Pour ¼ cup cold water into the pot to settle the grounds, and let it stand in a warm place 3 to 5 minutes. Strain the beverage through a fine wire strainer, muslin or cheesecloth into a hot serving pot.

The coffee pot should be removed from the fire immediately after the beverage begins to boil, because further boiling develops a bitterness of flavor.

For Graceful Carving.

A platter large enough to give room not only for the meat that is to be carved, but also for the carved portions, a sharp knife of appropriate size, and a suitable fork will aid the carver in doing a graceful act of cutting and serving the meat.

Recipes Give Tasty Bits for Halloween

Goblin Lollipops, Haystacks and Molasses Taffy Among Dishes.

HALLOWE'EN is just around the corner, so these recipes, submitted last week in The Post's contest, will be interesting to the many women who are planning parties for the children.

Hallowe'en Goblin Lollipops.

1 cup granulated sugar
½ cup white corn sirup
½ cup boiling water
1 pound of French prunes, for goblin heads
1 cup of chopped nut meats
Wooden meat skewers
12 or 14 small red apples, for goblin bodies
Small box of marshmallows for goblin collars

Steam the prunes until soft and stuff with nut meats, pressing the edges together. Make eyes, nose and mouth from nut bits. Polish the apples and make holes in each for skewer. Run the sharp end of the skewer first through the marshmallow and then into the stuffed prune. Boil the sugar, sirup and water in a small deep pan until it spins a very brittle thread. Dip the goblin's head and collar piece into the hot sirup (quickly) and lay on a buttered plate to dry and glaze. When cool, insert the free end of the skewer into the polished apple.

The following verse may be used for place cards or inclosed with a gift of goblin lollipops.

I come from the land of brooms and witches,
And pumpkin heads and funny breeches—
If you would know my magic charm,
Just eat me up without alarm.

Pastoral Changes Made As Conference Ends at Staunton, Va.

By the Associated Press.

Drainage Work Planned.

Special Dispatch to The Post.

Winchester, Va., Oct. 14.—City officials are preparing to tackle a drainage problem at the intersection of Kent and Piccadilly streets which has been tolerated for many years, chiefly because it involved the lowering of a railroad track.

C. P. Hardeson, division engineer of the Baltimore & Ohio Railroad, is expected tomorrow to approve plans for lowering the tracks of his company to street level at the Baltimore & Ohio station. When this is done, installation of storm sewer inlets will solve the drainage problem, City Manager Arthur Field said.

Women Blame Roosevelt for Nation's Woes

Speakers at G.O.P. Session Assail Bureaucracy and Dictatorship.

Special Dispatch to The Post.

Clarksburg, W. Va., Oct. 14.—President Roosevelt is "wholly and totally responsible for the moral, economic, financial and social disintegration of our Nation," Mrs. Elsie French Vanderbilt Fitzsimmons, of Newport, R. I., Republican national committeewoman, today declared in an address at the convention of the West Virginia Federation of Republican Woman's Clubs here.

"Shall we," she asked, "after 150 years of national existence, of freedom and opportunity for all, regardless of race, creed or station, voluntarily submit to the placing of an iron yoke about our shoulders, crushing us to serfdom under a juggernaut of bureaucracy and dictatorship unequalled in any present nation except Russia in the whole civilized world?

"Shall we become the slaves of a communistic system of dictatorship, whose administrators are drunk with power and who defy the laws of God and man?"

Mrs. Robert Loncoln Hoyal, Washington, director of the women's division of the Republican national committee, said, "there is a threefold challenge to Republican women. A challenge as Americans, as citizens and as partisans. As Americans to make certain that American institutions will survive, as citizens to accept our full responsibility as voters, and as partisans to prove to our Republican men folk that they were justified in full measure when they gave equal suffrage to women." She charged that Communist leaders are seeking the re-election of President Roosevelt.

Mrs. George A. Wyeth, of New York City, former president of the Women's National Republican Clubs, contrasted the President's campaign promises with his official performances. Walter S. Hallanan, West Virginia national committeeman, expressed the belief that Van Bittner, head of the coal miners' unions in this State, seeks to make Rush D. Holt Governor of the State, around whom to build a dictatorship.

100-Foot Plunge Of Auto Kills Man

Virginian's 3 Companions Injured in Fall.

Special Dispatch to The Post.

Harrisonburg, Va., Oct. 14.—Marvin Reese, 23, of West Rockingham, was killed early today when his automobile rolled down a 100-foot embankment on the Pendleton road near the top of Shenandoah Mountain, 20 miles west of here.

His three companions suffered cuts and bruises, being thrown from the rolling car, which was demolished when it struck a tree.

Companions said Reese threw the automobile out of gear when the top of the mountain was reached and that it got out of control. He was a saw mill employe.

Basic WPA Pay Retention Plea Of Cumberland

Maryland City Asks 50-Cent an Hour Scale Prevail on Local Projects.

By the Associated Press.

Cumberland, Md., Oct. 14.—A telegram urging that the basic wage rate of 50 cents an hour be retained on local WPA projects was sent today by the city council to State Works Progress Administrator Francis H. Dryden.

The request was made after representatives of the Allegany trade council appeared before the council to protest the WPA wage scale.

The council informed Dryden the existing rate, established for Cumberland by the Legislature, was being paid on the interceptor sewer job, a public works propect.

William A. Miller, president of the trades council, told the council the WPA rate for skilled and unskilled workmen was below the rate set by the Legislature.

He said the WPA program called for 140 hours of work a month for each man, with unskilled labor getting $40 a month; intermediate labor, $50; skilled labor, $60, and technical or professional men $66 a month.

Miller contended this scale would make a rate of about 28 cents an hour for unskilled labor and 42 cents for skilled labor. The local wage law provides that unskilled workmen on all city projects should receive 50 cents an hour.

Anne Arundel Tax Sale Draws Many

Fourth of 200 Properties Sold to Go to Individuals.

By the Associated Press.

Annapolis, Md., Oct. 14.—Private purchasers bought about 25 per cent of the 200 pieces of Anne Arundel County tax delinuent property sold at the courthouse door today, the remainder being taken over by the county.

While a group varying from 25 to 50 persons surrounded the auctioneers who droned through the description of the properties and announced the bids from 10 a. m. to 3 p. m., the interior of the courthouse was packed with taxpayers seeking to get their properties off the sale list.

C. Albert Hodges, former county treasurer, on August 8 advertised 3,506 pieces of property for sale for unpaid 1934 or prior taxes. This was reduced to from 800 to 1,000 properties when the sale began today. The auction will continue tomorrow and Wednesday. Property owners whose property is sold for taxes have a year and a day to redeem their holdings.

600 at Work In Orchards, Relief Ended

Big Apple Crop Solves Employment Problem in Hancock Area.

Little Anxiety Felt Over Price Drop; Poorer Grades Go Begging.

Special Dispatch to The Post.

Hancock, Md., Oct. 14.—Racing against time in an effort to complete the picking of one of the largest apple crops in years here, orchardists have between 600 and 700 pickers and packers at work. Fifty per cent of the crop is still on the trees, one of the larger growers estimated today. Weeks ago the labor supply in this section became exhausted and growers were forced to turn to other sections of western Maryland, Pennsylvania and West Virginia.

Virtually every family that had been on relief in this area for a year or more now has all able-bodied men and women working either in the orchards or packing sheds. Most of these are being paid $1.75 daily, with one orchard operating on a piece-work basis of 3½ cents a bushel to pickers.

A decline in the price of apples is not causing undue concern among larger growers here, who are storing against a time when the chain stores, which quoted throughout the country No. 1 apples at 79 cents, a bushel Saturday, will stock up.

Special Sales Hailed.

J. Andrew Cohill, one of the large growers here, commenting upon special sales of apples by chain stores, said growers should welcome these, for many people in metropolitan centers who seldom bought apples before, because of the high prices, have been buying by the bushel this fall and are developing a taste for apples prepared in various forms that will tend to create a larger market later in the winter. With the surplus thus removed now and the public buying more apples, growers can expect better prices for good quality fruit later, according to Cohill.

Hancock growers had been receiving for early apples shipped to England as high as $1.25 a bushel and until ten days ago from $2.50 to $3.50 a barrel for Jonathans. The price has receded to $2 and $2.50.

Poorer Grades Go Begging.

Growers here have been having trouble disposing of the poorer grades, canneries not taking as much of the surplus fruit as formerly. As one grower here expressed it, "We are going through a bargain period," in which cannery companies offer a take-it-or-leave-it price for seconds and thirds. Some of this surplus fruit has been sold for as low as 40 cents a hundred.

The inspection service here has been much more rigid than ever before, growers say. With the excellent quality of the fruit here and closer inspection, growers expect a favorable reaction on later markets.

Every cold storage plant in this section is already filled or space reserved and three of the larger orchardists here have installed refrigerating plants at their orchards or packing houses.

Jury Inquiry Set in Work Of Asylum

$19,000 of Maryland Hospital Funds for Last Year Unused.

Charges of Brutality and Bad Food Will Be Investigated.

By the Associated Press.

Baltimore, Oct. 14.—While State's Attorney George N. Fringer promised a Carroll County grand jury investigation into the Springfield State Hospital for the Insane, a study of State records revealed that $19,000 of the hospital's appropriation for last year had not been used.

Fringer, prosecuting attorney for Carroll County, said he intended asking the State survey commission for a copy of its report. The report, alleging brutality to patients, bad food and irregularity, was returned last week. The institution is located at Skyesville, in Carroll County.

Inquiry Set Next Month.

After receiving the report, Fringer said, he would study it for possible criminal charges. The report is a resume of testimony given to the commission. The transcript of this testimony would be requested and used as a basis for presentation of charges to the grand jury.

The probe wil lbegin early next month, as the grand jury convenes on November 4. Fringer said he did not think the jury would go to Skyesville, but that witnesses who had testified before the commission would be called to tell their story to the jury in the courthouse at Westminster.

Immediately after the Springfield report was returned, those in charge of the institution said that the amount for each patient's food per day was only 27 cents. This was revealed in connection with the charge of bad food. In regard to the brutality of attendants, they said that some of these were paid only $31.50 per month.

$19,000 Turned Back.

The $19,000 unexpended was turned back to the State treasury on October 1, the end of the fiscal year. It was a part of a total of $534,885 available for that year. This sum was made up of a regular appropriation of $473,701, and an allotment from the contingent fund of $61,184.

For the present fiscal year, which ends October 1, 1936, the sum of $518,190 has been appropriated. In addition to this, $34,000 has been allotted from the contingent fund, giving a total available of $552,190.

The total available for this fiscal year is $18,305 more than was available last year. It is also $34,188 more than was used to operate the institution last year.

Wrong Man Jailed by Mixup Of Names, Wins Right to Trial

Hearing Set for Today After Magistrate's Error Is Revealed.

By the Associated Press.

Bel Air, Md., Oct. 14.—A habeas corpus writ directing that a man committed without a hearing to the House of Correction be brought before him was signed by Judge Walter W. Preston on the petition of State Senator Harold E. Cobourn.

The hearing was set for 10 a. m. tomorrow. The man is Harry Manning, committed in place of Frank Kelly in a mixup of names by the committing magistrate. It was reported at first that Kelly was the man illegally detained.

Both men, it was said, were before Magistrate Thelma Whitney, secretary to Cobourn, on charges of vagrancy and malicious destruction of property. Kelly was heard on the vagrancy charge and sentenced to a year in the House of Correction. Manning asked for a jury trial.

When it was discovered that Manning had been committed instead of Kelly, papers were made out for the latter and the sheriff was told to return Manning to Havre de Grace, where the case was heard, to await grand jury action. The superintendent refused to surrender his prisoner because he had no such authority.

Cobourn's action today served to correct the error of his magistrate-secretary.

By the Associated Press.

Later, while in the employ of a flour company, he was noticed by B. F. Newcomer, president of the concern, who took the boy with him when he became president of the Safe Deposit & Trust Co., in 1886.

Nice Refuses To Oust Rudy On Charges

He Tells Employe Group Inquiry Fails to Show Ground for Action.

Discloses Investigation Made in Suspension of Examiner.

By the Associated Press.

Baltimore, Oct. 14.—Gov. Harry W. Nice declined today to remove Walter R. Rudy as commissioner of motor vehicles, after an investigation of charges made against Rudy by the Maryland Classified Employes Association.

In a letter to Willis R. Jones, attorney for the association, the Governor said:

"My investigation discloses no ground which would justify me in removing Mr. Rudy as commissioners of motor vehicles for the State of Maryland. I wish to express my appreciation to you for bringing these matters to my attention and to assure you that it is my purpose to uphold the merit system law."

Col. Jones Investigates.

The Governor revealed that he had asked Col. Harry C. Jones, the State employment commissioner, to investigate the charges and also had asked Rudy to make a statement in connection with them. The accusations were filed by Willis Jones after Milton W. Schlutter, acting legal examiner, was suspended on charges made by Rudy.

Five charges were made against Rudy, but only three of them dealt with merit system matters. Col. Jones considered these three the Governor said, and reported "no action * * * is required.

One of them dealt with the dismissal of an employe as a result of the consolidation of three departments in Rudy's office, the Governor said. This employe was reinstated when Rudy was told his action was illegal, Nice said.

Denies Any Pressure.

The Governor said Rudy denied that he had exerted pressure on Schlutter to get him to restore a license which had been revoked. He also denied that he had been asked to do so. The Governor's letter said Rudy had been exercising proper discretion in restoring the license of another driver.

The Governor said Rudy told him Schlutter's case was pending before the employment commissioner and therefore should not be discussed.

55,000 Fans Expected At Fray

Thrilling Triumph Over Penn Sounds a New Era for Elis.

Pond Praises His Team; to Brush Up Line Play, Air Defense.

By the Associated Press.

NEW HAVEN, Conn., Oct. 14.—The cash register at the Yale Athletic Association jingled a post-depression tune today as it picked up the echo of the Elis' victory over Pennsylvania.

Once a $1,000,000 sport, football at Yale, as at other universities, has been more or less in financial doldrums during recent years. But, the Bulldog's spectacular triumph last week apparently has sounded a new era at Yale.

Athletic Association officials reported today that the Yale-Navy contest Saturday promised to attract more persons to the bowl than any football game since 1931, when the Yale-Army tilt attracted 80,000 persons, who filled every vantage point.

Horde of Applications.

While sons of Eli, everywhere, were singing the praises of Capt. Mather K. Whitehead's eleven, Business Manager Harold F. Woodcock, of the Yale A. A., and his staff were working frantically to fill the sudden avalanche of applications which today's mail brought.

As long lines of ticket seekers strode past his door, Woodcock "Judging from the demand for tickets, the contest on Saturday will attract close to 55,000 persons, the largest crowd since 1931."

rom another official source it was said that Woodcock probably was being "conservatice."

Squad Is Cheered.

Meanwhile, Head Coach Raymond Raymond W. (Ducky) Pond and the gridiron squad were cheered wherever they went by students and local alumni for their "intestinal fortitude" and ability to come from behind despite discouraging odds.

Pond, who warned Eli foes weeks before the season began "to hang up baskets where the goal posts are because Yale is going to play basket ball-football," was pleased. He said:

"The team played as a unit once it got going. The blocking was good as was the general team play after the first period and half of the second quarter. The squad showed me it has plenty of what it takes when it came back after trailing 20-6. We'll have to brush up our pass defense and line play before we are ready for Nacy."

Louis Battle For Crown Hits Snag

Contract May Keep Negro Out of Bout; Schmeling May Face Braddock.

Special Dispatch to The Post.

NEW YORK, Oct. 14.—The agreement Joe Louis has with the Twentieth Century Sporting Club does not expire until January 1, 1937, Julian Black, manager of the Brown Bomber, explained today in a wire to James J. Johnston, Madison Square Garden promoter.

As a result, Black was forced to decline Johnston's offer for Louis to box James J. Braddock, the world's heavyweight champion, next June in the Garden Bowl.

The manager suggested that Johnston get in touch with Mike Jacobs, who is expected back tonight from Bermuda.

In another telegram, Johnston inquired of Black if Jacobs was managing Louis.

His next move, the Garden promoter said, would be to offer Max Schmelling, the former champion, an opportunity to regain the crown by meeting Braddock.

Schmeling Believed Ready.

"I don't think Schmeling will be afraid of Braddock," Johnston remarked. "Louis is probably signed with Jacobs, but he may be only trying to avoid meeting an opponent he knows can lick him."

The situation, created by the exchange of telegrams, may reach a climax this week as Black and John Roxborough are due in town tomorrow.

Braddock is on an exhibition tour in the Middle West, but a statement is expected to be issued from his office tomorrow.

Jacobs, Black and Roxborough also are expected to have something to say about current heavyweight developments.

Black and Roxborough will have the challenge of Tony Galento, the Newark heavy, to consider, as well as the championship situation. Galento, rated by many the hardest hitting heavyweight now active, wants to fight Louis either here or in Newark. He at least has a punch to recommend him.

Local Pro Gridders Will Tackle Famed Outfit in Baltimore.

THE Washington Federals will mingle with the elite of professional football tonight at Baltimore where they oppose the Chicago Bears in an exhibition engagement. The game starts at 8 o'clock.

Some of the gridiron's most brilliant men will appear with the Bears, including Beattie Feathers, Tenessee; Cotton Warburton, Southern California; Jack Manders and Bronko Nagurski, Minnesota; Hewitt, Michigan, and Karr, West Virginia, all of whom were outstanding college players.

The Federals, too, will have a couple of well-known players in Red Oliver, former Texas Christian ace, and Tom Oliver, punting star of the 1934 Catholic University. Oliver made a new, all-time punting record against Western Maryland last season, kicking the ball 84 yards on the fly.

Wilson's Sox Defeated By Williamsport Nine

Special Dispatch to The Post.

Williamsport, Md., Oct. 14.—The Wildcats, local baseball nine, defeated Hack Wilson's Blue Sox here yesterday, 5 to 4, in a game played for the benefit of the proposed memorial to 14 local high school students who lost their lives in the grade-crossing crash at Rockville last April.

Two former Blue Ridge Leaguers, Lefty Willis and Roberts, pitched for the Martinsburg nine, and were touched up for 11 hits. The Blue Sox's three-run rally in the eighth fell one run short of tying the score.

Grid Muddle Over U.S. Is Clearing

Holy Cross, Yale, Pitt, Navy Among East's Contenders.

Races in Some Sections Made Open by Choices' Upset.

By the Associated Press.

NEW YORK, Oct. 14.—Hitch your chair to the desk and let's try to sort out this hurly-burly football season.

The defeat of such early season favorites as Stanford, Alabama, Tennessee and Fordham has thrown sectional championships wide open, but nevertheless the situation slowly is beginning to take shape along the line.

The East still has more than a dozen teams belonging to the "leader" class. Some critics hold Holy Cross' Crusaders, a big, powerful outfit with a deceptive attack, as just about the strongest of the lot, but there will be many dissenters among the supporters of Colgate, a red-hot contender despite losing to Iowa, Jock Sutherland's Pitt Panthers, Yale, Princeton, Navy and Columbia. One of the last four will be eliminated from the running Saturday, for Yale and Navy clash at New Haven. Columbia will engage Penn a Philadelphia and may have to stay in the race.

Midwest Contenders.

The Midwest has three outstanding independent teams in Notre Dame, Marquette and Michigan State.

The "Big Ten" season is too young to gage from a strictly conference angle. It's impossible to rate them numerically, but the leader can be chosen from among Ohio State, Minnesota, Purdue, Illinois and Iowa. Minnesota, looked upon as an unknown quantity after a somewhat unimpressive opening against North Dakota State, threw off the wraps and proved ti "belonged" last Saturday when teh Gophers turned back the powerful and, ni some quarters, highly favored Nebraska Cornhuskers.

Dopsters can breathe a little easier in the Southern Conference. North Carolina, Duke and North Carolina State are the top-fighters, with the prospect that N. C. and Duke will fight it out down the stretch for the sectional honor.

The Southeastern Conference situation, however, is in a terrific muddle with any one of eight teams left with chances to cop the title Louisiana State and Vanderbilt seemingly having a bulge on Kentucky, Tennessee, Tulane, Auburn, Georgia and Tennessee.

One might as well try and fish for a pin in a pot of molten lead as try ot dope the Southwest. Rice, Southern Methodist, Texas and Texas Christian. There they are and take your pick.

In the Big Six sector Nebraska is the ruling favorite over first, Oklahoma, and second, Kansas State. In the RockyMountain region it seems to be Denver, Utah and Utah State.

On the Pacific Coast California's Bears, with consecutive victories over the formidable St. Mary's and Oregon elevens and Santa Clara on deck Saturday, look like the best by a shade but University of California at Los Angeles and Washington's Huskies are right in the thick of the argument, both with excellent claims.

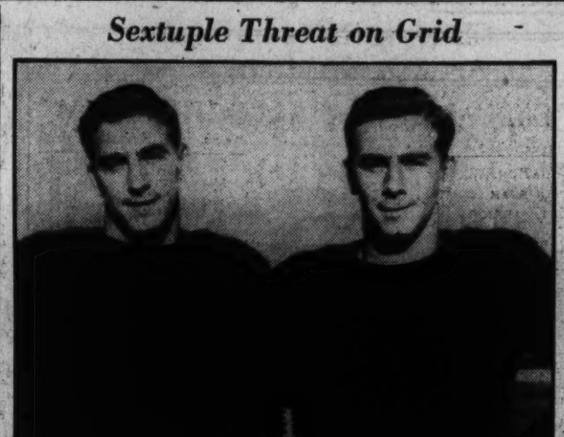

Petersburg High Wins Over Moorefield, 27-0

Special Dispatch to The Post.

Petersburg, W. Va., Oct. 14. — Petersburg High scored a 27-to-0 victory over Moorefield High on the local field. Riggleman scored three touchdowns and Belt one. Riggleman place-kicked three extra points.

It was the opener for Moorefield, which seldom had the ball and could not gain at any stage of the game.

Sextuple Threat on Grid

If brothers are triple-threat men in their own right on the gridiron, does the fact that they are twins make them a sextuple threat? These boys are the Guepe twins, Art (left) and Al, members of the Marquette University eleven.

Rowe, Warneke's Victim Twice, Glad They're Not in Same Loop

By the Associated Press.

KANSAS CITY, Oct. 14.—One of the things that cheers Lynwood (Schoolboy) Rowe these days is the thought that he and Lon Warneke—who beat Rowe twice in the World's Series—aren't in the same league.

But he thinks Lanky Lon feels likewise.

"I'm glad I don't have to face Warneke through a major league schedule," the tall Arkansawyer said today. "And I don't think Warneke would want to face me that often, either."

Rowe was in town with Tommy Bridges, hero of two World's Series games, and other big-leaguers, after an exhibition game in which their pick-up nine lost yesterday.

The Schoolboy was asked how he thought he'd fare if the world champion Detroit Tigers and Chicago's Cubs were in the same circuit—and he met Warneke once in every series through the season.

"The breaks would decide it," he said without hesitation, "just as they did in the World's Series."

Hunched over on the players' bench, Rowe was smiling until asked:

"What was the matter in the first inning of the first series game? (The Cubs scored two runs off the Schoolboy in the first and won behind Warneke, 3 to 0.) Weren't you warmed up?"

Rowe stiffened, almost leaped off the bench and shouted:

"Did you see it?" The answer was "no."

"A bunch of bleeding, bloody hits." He was still shouting. "Rogell barely got his hands on an infield roller, but booted it out to center field and it went for a double. I fed Hartnett one way in on the handle and he lucked a pop single over first."

Bleeding, bloody hits, in diamond parlance, are the scratchiest kind of scratch hits.

Rowe gives the Cubs credit for only one real hit in that first game, Demaree's homer in the ninth. He resents even that. Demaree, a high ball slugger, reached 6 inches over his head to blast that homer. Rowe purposely threw that high one to get Frank to "bite." Instead, Demaree parked it in the bleachers.

With Rowe on the barnstorming tour are Tommy Bridges, who won two of the Tigers' four games, including the final, and Charley Gehringer, also acclaimed by sports writers as a series hero.

Youth Killed, Parents Hold Grid Fate

Kansas City High Schools May Abolish Game as Result of Death.

By the Associated Press.

KANSAS CITY, Oct. 14.—With the parents of Kansas City high school boys was placed responsibility tonight for deciding whether football shall be abolished as a result of the death of a player.

John McKee, 16-year-old Southwest High School back, was buried today. He died Saturday. He was injured in making a tackle that saved the game for his team, which won over Manuel Training High, 7 to 6.

Robert L. Mehornay, president of the school board, said the question whether interscholastic football should be continued would be considered at a board meeting Thursday.

"I want to emphasize, however," he added, "that the final decision rests almost entirely on the parents of the boys playing football—not only at Southwest, but at all the public high schools in the city."

Withhold Views.

Board members individually said they were not prepared to dicuss their views pending Thursday night's meeting. Parents of members of the Southwest team generally favored continuing the schedule.

"As a coach, I may have a prejudice in favor of the game," said Louis House, coach at Southwest High School, "but if John's death was the fault of the game, then I say all the football games ever played aren't worth one boy's life."

Young McKee's death is the second here in two years attributed to football. In 1933, a 14-year-old youngster playing on a "midget team" suffered an infection which proved fatal.

Mount St. Mary's Meets Gettysburg

Injuries Hurt Squad in Drills for Contest.

Emmitsburg, Md., Oct. 14.—Minus the presence of several of their regulars, who were injured in the game last Saturday with the University of Delaware, members of the Mount St. Mary's football squad began preparations today for their game next Saturday with Gettysburg.

Frank Shemonsky, regular half back, who suffered an injury in the first half of last week's game together with Corning Smith, quarter back also injured at that time, were missing as the squad took the field this afternoon. Orfel Tosti, a tackle, and John Cituk and Al Thomas, both regular guards, were not in uniform for today's drill because of injured ankles. It is hoped that the entire quintet will be ready for practice by tomorrow.

The game, always looked forward to by the Mounts, holds more than usual interest this year. Followers of the local team are hopeful that the long superiority of the Pennsylvania eleven will be broken this week. Should the Mounts' injured gridders return to work within the next two days, their team will enter the contest with an even chance to win, but should they be confined to the sidelines for a very long period, Gettysburg will be favored.

Terps Used 2 Ineligibles, Is Charge

Sniscak, Carolina, Says Andorka and Farrell Should Be Barred.

Also Asserts Maryland Falsified Records About Himself.

STRIKING back at the University of Maryland, whose athletic board was instrumental in having him ruled ineligible on the even of the Maryland-North Carolina game last week, John Sniscak, a member of the Carolina football squad, yesterday accused the Terrapins of using ineligible players on their team.

Those accused are Bill Andorka, regular center, who is alleged to have played at West Liberty Teachers College, and Al Farrell, reserve tackle, a former Gonzaga High School star, whom Sniscak in an affidavit said played freshman football at Fordham and laso played professional ball with the Fredericksburg, Va., eleven.

Deny He Played.

Maryland officials admitted that Farrell had matriculated for a short time at Fordham, but denied he ever played football for the Rams, freshman or varsity. They also admitted that Andorka had played for West Liberty Teachers, but pointed out that under Southern Conference rules heis eligible to play at Maryland.

Sniscak, who was barred from competition just a short time before his teammates annihilated Maryland, 33 to 0, at Baltimore, also declared that Maryland had falsified the records in declaring that he had played football for Geneva College before matriculating at Catholic University.

Decide Not to Shirk.

Maryland yesterday was reported as having said that Sniscak's status was called to its attention by a local newspaper, and that it did not intend to protest until after considering the matter carefully, and deciding that it would be shirking its duty—clearly outlined in conference rules. So it protested.

Maryland knew that Sniscak was ineligible almost one week before it decided to lodge its protest.

Huntington, '13, Named as Quarter Back of First Team.

By George Trevor,

FAIR CHENANGO'S sun-kissed valley is famous for its sweet apples and sweeter football players. Colgate spirit, a by-word on the gridiron, makes up for lack of student numbers. The little giant of the North can show an old-time roster worthy of any great university.

Tow-headed little Ellery Huntington, elusive as a Scotch mist, inspiring as an evangelist, ranks with the great quarter backs of all time. Reared on the Colgate Campus Ellery early determined to win a name for himself in football. He practiced for hours pegging a ball at a spot on his cellar door. He read books on quarterback strategy and quizzed himself daily on choice of plays. Once in college Huntington proceeded to turn theory into fact. Larry Bankhart, among the smartest of coaches, could pick no flaws in Huntington's generalship. Huntington ran through Syracuse and Yale like a will-o-the-wisp.

Oc. Anderson, a 10-second man, twice went to town against Yale in 1915 from points beyond midfield. He could hit a handkerchief with a pass at 30 yards from the dreaded Bankhart's spread formation.

Anderson never dropped a punt during four years and never played one safe either.

Eddie Tryon ranks with Kaw, of Cornell, as the greatest mud-runner football has known. On a wet track Tryon was even better than on a dry field, which is saying plenty. Eddie slithered through a swamp to beat Princeton in 1925, but his peak performance came at Ohio State's expense in 1923 when he thrice dashed to touchdowns in the wake of Tiny Welsh's interference. An underslung type, Tryon kept his feet like one of those lead-weighted celluloid dolls.

Slant shouldered, bow-legged Walter Runge was the greatest blocking back in Colgate annals. As a take-out man he ranks with Hardwick of Harvard. Runge's lethal interference made Riley Castleman's fame as an open-field runner. Against Dartmouth in 1904 Runge took out three men on one play, bobbing to his feet each time to keep ahead of Castleman.

Colgate boasts such steamroller full backs as Macaluso, Irwin, Lyon, Shaughnessy and Swartout, but Hank Gillo was the hardest driver of the lot. Gillo could do the century in 11 seconds and thus cash in on his bovine rushes. He played 40 minutes against Syracuse in 1919 with a broken collar bone strapped in place. Charlie Soleau, most versatile of the Kerr era backs, handled the ball like a juggler. Leslie Hart was a flash at turning the end.

Colgate is noted for its mighty tackles—West, Abell, Brooks, Horning and Huntington. Belford West epitomized the virtues of an ideal tackle. His foot work and use of hands was beyond criticism. He could punt and pass and place-kick like a quarter back. Against Syracuse in 1915 he booted a 52-yard field goal. Despite a bandaged knee he made the All-America two years running.

Eddie Tryon Honored; Orsi and Anderson Get End Posts.

Tuffy Abell, broad as a barn door, did not look his 6 feet. Fast, despite his huge bulk, he could punt and place-kick. He split Yale's uprights from the 42-yard line in 1915. Jim Welsh, called Tiny, because he weighed 215 pounds, was a squat, thick-set fellow, who popped out of line to lead interference as nimbly as a cat scales a fence. Jim was the best open field blocker in Colgate history. He was adept at place-kicking, too. It's just an old Colgate custom for line men to boot field goals. Bob Smith, Kerr's torpedo-like interferer, stood out above the modern gods.

John Orsi, a second Oosterbaan at snatching passes, was the hardest driver among Colgate ends. Winnie Anderson, of recent fame, had relaxed elbows and hands that gave with a thrown ball.

Fred Peterson, king-pin of Colgate's centers, almost murdered Ketcham, of Yale, in 1913, and fought Syracuse to the finish on two sprained ankles. This Swede was tough. Glenn Peters, of the 1933 team, had an even wider defensive range than Peterson.

Kate, at $11.10, Defeats Bloodroot in Laurel's Feature Race

Bradley Filly Outfinished By Mare

Silent Shot Is Third as 7,500 Watch; Double Pays $32.40.

By Walter Haight.

A Staff Correspondent.

LAUREL RACE TRACK, Oct. 14. Kate, the old Howe Stable mare, gave a speed lesson to a group of young upstarts in The Tolchester Purse, yesterday's feature race at Laurel. The ancient daughter of Westwick just ran and ran, tending to her own knitting, and when the finish line was reached she had a good half-length margin on Bloodrot, the favorite and a frisky gal of 3 years. Silent Shot was third in the group of five that accpeted the issue.

Running over the mile and one-sixteenth course, Kate was in front virtually all the way but those holding her tickets wouldn't have given a plugged nickle for her chances in midstretch. At this point, Bloodrot was burning oil in a rush from last place that had all the earmarks of victory.

But while Bloodroot was finishing on the inside where the slow track was heaviest, Jockey Merritt had Kate out in the drier going and from somewhere she gathered enough momentum to hold the charging Bloodrot safe.

Silent Shot, a forward factor most of the way, had all he could do to save third money from Safe and Sound. The other member of the party, Furfiber, gave up chasing Kate early in the running.

Kate was luke warm in the betting as the crowd of 7,500 poured in the greenbacks on Bloodroot. As a result, Kate brought an $11.10 mutuel to her backers.

Double Pays $32.40.

The day's daily double resulted in a reward of $32.40 for those who backed the combination of Termination in the first race and Adams Eve in the third race.

Termination, with Balaski in the saddle, scored a nose decision over Ugin in the day's opener. Third and well beaten came Capt. Byam, the paddock tip. Capt. Byam worked his way to the front after breaking slowly, but Ugin ran the good thing into defeat. In the stretch, Termination came up to battle it out with Ugin and under energetic handling was barely up in time. Termination paid $6.20.

The steeplechase provided a thrilling finish between Hurry Harry, the $4 favorite, and Capstan, in which the former took the decision by a half-length. Quick Verdict was third in the field of eight. Capstan did virtually all the front running, followed by Hurry Harry. With two jumps to go, Hurry Harry moved up and took the lead going over the last fence, only to tire on the flat. Capstan came again and was cutting down the winner at every stride. Quick Verdict might have been closer but for a bad landing at the twelfth fence. Brad was the only non-finisher. He ran out at the tenth fence while in the midst of a rush that seemed to have him headed for a money position.

Rallies to Triumph.

Adams Eve, Dr. J. Fred Adams' filly, finally won a race, coming from behind to take the third event from Boocord in a stretch drive. Small Change was third in the field of 12. After a variety of pace-setters had had their innings, Jockey Dunbar brought the filly up with a rush in the stretch and it was all over except the $9.80 pay-off.

R. Pinchot, with Balaski riding his second winner of the day in the saddle, turned in a fast stretch move to take the fourth race. Portden, the longest shot in the six-horse race, was second, and Camino Real reeled into third position after setting a dizzy pace. R. Pinchot was briskly played at a $7.50 mutuel.

Fair Knightess warmed the hearts of the favorite players in the fifth race by scoring an easy victory over four other juvenile sprinters. Sandstone was a surprise second, with Lovely Girl third. Fair Knightess was not rushed, but she took command at the stretch turn and there was none to catch her. Merritt rode the winner and he was sending her along strongly at the finish, despite his long lead. She paid $3.90.

Manager Bill led Tiempo and Miss Careful to the wire in the sixth race to pay a $6.30 mutuel, while Kurdair came out of the pack entering the stretch to take the final and pay $31.80.

Two-dollar mutuels paid—TERMINATION, $6.20, $3.20, $2.30; UGIN, $3.90, $2.70; CAPTAIN BYAM, $2.70.

TERMINATION, away well but unable to keep pace with the early leaders, responded readily to intermittent punishment in the last five-sixteenths, swung to the outside in the firmer footing and under severe urging was up in the last strides. UGIN, hard hustled to hold a short lead in the first five furlongs, shook off repeated bids from CAPTAIN BYAM and continued resolutely until the end. CAPTAIN BYAM had splendid speed to race forwardly, made stout efforts in the last half-mile, but faltered in the closing furlong. FOOTSTEP broke well, but did not appear to favor the footing. KNIGHT WARRIOR could not threaten. ARMY AND NAVY was outrun. ONLY HOPE was not persevered with when he labored in the going.

SECOND RACE—About two miles. Steeplechase. Purse, $1,000; claiming. For 3-year-olds and upward. Start good. Won driving; place, same. Went to post at 2:04. Off at 2:05. Winner, F. A. Clark's gr. g. Two-dollar mutuels paid—HURRY HARRY, $4.00, $3.50, $2.50; CAPSTAN, $4.40, $2.90; QUICK VERDICT, $2.80.

HURRY HARRY, fencing stoutly in the last mile after racing forwardly from the start, wore CAPSTAN down coming to the next to last fence, but had to be kept under severe pressure until the finish. CAPSTAN, steadied to all of his fences and saving ground, came again on the flat after clearing the final fence. QUICK VERDICT went strongly from the beginning, recovered after making a bad landing at the twelfth fence and fought it out willingly. DUNDRILLIN, permitted to drop far out of contention, could not threaten after moving into a contending position. POSTMAN HOME was poorly handled for the entire trip. He lost much ground. BAY BROOM was done after the first mile. BRAD ran out of the course going to the eleventh fence.

Two-dollar mutuels paid—ADAMS EVE, $9.80, $4.60, $3.70; BOOCORD, $4.80, $3.80; SMALL CHANGE, $12.70.

ADAMS EVE, kept close to the leaders in the opening stages, reached contention when approaching the home stretch, came through on the inside of BOOCORD in the closing furlong and, under severe pressure, was up in the last sixteenth. BOOCORD, a keen factor from the start, displaced BALLY BAY when entering the home stretch, but was unable to resist the winner. SMALL CHANGE followed in the first flight and came willingly for the final test after making a wide turn into the home stretch. TODY CON showed a good effort. OUR SHIP closed with a belated rush. BALLY BAY could not get clear early and he weakened badly. HANDLEY broke well, but lacked speed. RUSTIC JOE could not untrack himself. CANROSE ran out badly rounding the turn.

DAILY DOUBLE (FIRST AND THIRD RACES) PAID $32.40.

FOURTH RACE—Six furlongs. Purse, $900; claiming. For 3-year-olds and upward. Start good from stall gates in chute. Won driving; place, same. Went to post at 3:11. Off at 3:12. Winner, A. B. Two-dollar mutuels paid—R. PINCHOT, $7.50, $5.10, $2.90; PORTDEN, $14.70, $5.40; CAMINO REAL, $2.50.

R. PINCHOT, forcing a fast pace from the start, was forced wide into the home stretch by CAMINO REAL, responded stoutly after being straightened away, and came out in the closing sixteenth. PORTDEN, forwardly placed, obtained racing room on the inside entering the home stretch and closed gamely. CAMINO REAL, hard ridden early to hold a short lead, was steered out into the better footing when reaching the home stretch, but failed to rally under punishment. DESERT CALL could not better his position at any stage. SINGING HEART was held safe. MAD BETH was squeezed back in the first sixteenth and could not improve her position.

FIFTH RACE—Six furlongs. Purse, $1,000; allowances. For 2-year-old fillies. The Anne Arundel. Start good from stall gates in chute. Won easily; place, driving. Went to post at 3:40. Off at 3:44. Two-dollar mutuels paid—FAIR KNIGHTESS, $3.90, $2.80, $2.30; SANDSTONE, $9.70, $4.30; LOVELY GIRL, $3.00.

FAIR KNIGHTESS, strongly handled to get to the front in the first quarter-mile, went out into the firmer footing when reaching the turn, saved ground wherever possible and drew out when kept under severe pressure. SANDSTONE secured racing room on the inside of the leaders at the turn, then held on stoutly for the balance of the trip. LOVELY GIRL was under strong handling throughout, but could not threaten seriously in the late stages. GILT was outrun. STAGE WHISPER tired badly after a half-mile.

SIXTH RACE—One and one-sixteenth miles. Purse, $1,000; allowances. For 3-year-olds and upward. Start good from stall gates. Won driving; place, same. Went to post at 4:10. Off at 4:11½. Winner, Howe Stable's ch. m. (5), by Westwick—Thamar. Trained by D. C. Harrison. Value to winner, $700; second, $150; third, $100; fourth, $50. Time, 0:24 3-5, 0:49 2-5, 1:15, 1:40 4-5, 1:48 1-5.

Two-dollar mutuels paid—KATE, $11.10, $3.70, $2.60; BLOODROOT, $2.50, $2.10; SILENT SHOT, $2.60.

KATE rushed hard to the first turn to gain command, was kept out in the firmer footing after reaching the back stretch, continued strongly after being overtaken midway of the home stretch and was up in the last 20 yards. BLOODROOT, shuffled back going to the first turn, was steered to the inside when reaching the final turn, displaced KATE when straightened into the home stretch, but was kept in the deeper footing and she flattened out right at the end. SILENT SHOT, in the thick of contention early, dropped back at the last turn, but came again nearing the end.

SEVENTH RACE—One and one-sixteenth miles. Purse, $900; claiming. For 3-year-olds and upward. Start good from stall gates. Won driving; place, same. Went to post at 4:40. Off at 4:41½. Winner, A. C. Two-dollar mutuels paid—MANAGER BILL, $6.30, $3.50, $2.30; TIEMPO, $4.60, $2.90; MISS CAREFUL, $3.00.

MANAGER BILL, steadied in near pursuit of TIEMPO until reaching the last turn, moved to the front with a rush and, stoutly handled thereafter, held TIEMPO safe. Latter, displaced midway of the final bend, saved ground during the stretch drive and outstayed MISS CAREFUL. Latter, reserved for six furlongs while on the outside of the leaders, made a determined effort when reaching the home stretch, but hung during the closing furlong. SHIP EXECUTIVE was racing gamely, but was unable to make up any ground at the end. FOUR SPOT went well placed, but failed to rally. HUT was outrun.

Two-dollar mutuels paid—KURDAIR, $31.80, $16.80, $10.00; HIGH FLAG, $11.50, $6.20; TOLIMATA, $4.30.

KURDAIR, permitted to settle in his best stride before moving into contention, went to the front with a rush after swinging to the outside at the final turn, then held sway for the balance of the trip. HIGH FLAG, rushed hard from the outside position to take command at the first turn, resisted stiff contention from CHANCE DAME in the first seven furlongs and held on well after being overtaken. TOLIMATA, under strong urging to hold a position with the leaders, continued gamely after swerving toward the inside in the closing furlong. APATHY improved his position steadily. He met with interference from TOLIMATA inside the closing furlong. CHANCE DAME was used up trying to run down HIGH FLAG. BULLFIGHTER had no excuses. FURLED FLAG was unable to threaten. HOT GRIDDLE stopped.

Discuss Doping Porblem

At the Post . . .

Laurel Race Track, Oct. 14.

Dear Al:

There was a rumor at the track today that all is not well between Jockey Don Meade and Owner E. R. Bradley and that the boy will not have his contract renewed by the Kentuckian. From what I can gather, it looks as if Les Balaski will get the job. A number of excellent riders, including Meade, are expected to swing into action here before the week is out. Silvio Coucci, Eddie Arcaro, Joe Wagner are a few. Johnny Gilbert, who is in trouble with racing officials, would like to ride, but I understand that it will be a long time before he is allowed to go postward again. There are plenty of riders already on the grounds but only a few of them can do more than stay on a horse. Laurel is getting better horses, too. Eight carloads came in this morning from New York and a majority of them should see action during the next few days. Clocker Mike was very grouchy today. He hasn't had a sane moment since Saturday when he sold a $5 ticket on Keep Out for $3 in order to play something else. And then Keep Out won.

BILL.

First race—Tohani ran o game race here earlier in the meeting behind Stage Whisper, and has been a factor in every start. This field appears to fit her needs and I'm stringing along. Makeit is due respect because of that last, a victory. Flaming Swords to take care of the others.

Second race—Toyer is the natural choice here. He turned in a nice winning effort here and needs only to run back to that race. Lel has been poorly ridden and improved handing would fit this one close. Anchors Aweigh for the minor award.

Third race—Miss Rainbow has a second and a third to hercredit in her last two starts. She is a gem stretch runner and may take the measure of Belle Grier. The latter has been earning her way and is the one to beat. Helios' last, in cheaper company, was a beaut.

Fourth race—Still Alarm won that last impressively and seems the logical horse in this field. A good ride is all that is needed. Sandstone is dropping down a bit and has speed that will have to be reckoned with here. Grand Knight went well at a longer route.

Fifth race—Steward was a galloping winner in his first start and turned in excellent time. Meets some of the best sprinters on the grounds in this field, but I believe he is the right horse. Toro Nancy and Nautch are good now and will be ready if the top one falters.

Sixth race—I'm going to string along with Clocker Mike in this race. He says that Peter Pepper is ready to win. This one drops down among his own kind and we shall see what we shall see. Masked Belle and Good Visibility for the place and show.

Seventh race—Treasury Key is one that tries right along. Has quite a bit of early speed and may last to take this purse. Flowery Lady, well beaten last out, has been rounding into shape and may surprise. Red Badge to take care of the others.

Eighth race—Politen and Wishing Star come off good efforts to contest here and I prefer them in the order named. Sun Abbot seems to have an edge on the others.

Generals Count On Bonino in Centre Tilt

Plays at Tackle This Year; Squad Will Depart on Thursday.

Special Dispatch to The Post.

LEXINGTON, Va., Oct. 14.—There's one member of the Washington and Lee eleven who will cause Centre College particular trouble when the two teams meet in Louisville Saturday.

He's big, genial Hugh Bonino, one of the best linemen ever to don a Washington and Lee uniform.

Last year Bonino was selected all-South Atlantic and all-Virginia guard by a heavy vote of sports writers. This year, playing at tackle, he promises to eclipse his performances of the last two years.

Praised by Many.

There are many observers in Virginia who have sung praise of his football, especially since the Generals' gallant but futile battle against Duke University at Richmond on October 5, when he put up a brilliant performance in the face of great odds.

Bonino, a senior, tips the scales this year at 240 pounds, six pounds heavier than he was last year. He is fast on his feet and stands a little over 6 feet tall.

Year before last the big Hawthrone, N. J., lad played tackle; last year he was shifted to guard, and this season he is back at tackle in a shake-up of the Generals' line brought about by the illness of Tubby Owings, 257-pound tackle from Norfolk, who has not been able to play.

Spessard Other Tackle.

Playing at the other tackle for the Generals this year is a hefty sophomore, Bob Spessard, of Roanoke, who towers above everyone else on the squad. Spessard stands 6 feet 7 inches and weighs 219. Coaches believe he will develop into one of their most valuable men after a little more experience, although he could hardly be classed as a novice now.

The Washington and Lee squad plans to leave Lexington Thursday for Louisville, where it will attempt to take vengeance out on Centre for the severe 26-0 setback handed out by Duke. Coach Tex Tilson plans to take some 25 men on the trip, the longest to be taken by the Generals this fall.

WHEN LEAVES TURN BROWN

TO NUT BROWN ALE

Folks do natural things—just naturally. There's a most appropriate time for everything—that is, for everything good.

And Baltimore American Ale is good. The chummy dark bottle lives up to its inviting appearance. The nutty flavor, the winey tang, is a substantial companion of the tonic Autumn air.

It's great to come in from a bracing walk and be greeted by an equally bracing bottle of your old Autumn friend.

Rail President Hostile to Rule By Government

Value of Roads Is Almost Equal to National Debt, Says Davis.

Special Dispatch to The Post.

Hoboken, N. J., Oct. 14.—Indicating that railroad improvement is keeping pace with business recovery, J. M. Davis, president of the Lackawanna Railroad, addressing the Hoboken Chamber of Commerce today, said that neither the American people nor the Government favors public ownership of any industry.

Mr. Davis contended that the public debt would be nearly doubled if the railroads were taken over by the Government. He advocated "equalization of taxes of railroads and their competitors, so that both will be upon a comparable basis and their charges for services performed thus will be more nearly upon a parity." Continuing, he said, in part:

"The railroads are conceded to be worth $25,000,000,000. That sum is not much less than the present national debt. If the Government were to acquire the railroads its public debt would be nearly doubled. The American people now wonder how funds are to be obtained with which to pay existing taxes. A recent tabulation disclosed that the railroads pay at least 60 varieties of taxes to each and every branch of government and for every conceivable purpose.

Largest Taxpayers.

"The railroads are the country's largest taxpayers. If the properties were to be acquired by the Government, their tax payments, a considerable portion of which now support Government, State, counties and municipalities, would cease. Then the taxpayers would be compelled to make up that revenue deficiency from other sources and to meet by additional taxes the deficits which would result from the more expensive governmental operation of the railroads.

"How closely railroad prosperity is linked to national welfare is disclosed by an examination of purchases. Railroad purchases in 1926 amounted to $1,187,000,000, while in 1933 their purchases had declined to $447,000,000. Last year rail purchases amounted to $578,000,000.

Auto Production Jumps During Week

Detroit, Oct. 14 (AP).—Cram's Reports, Inc., in its weekly analysis of the automotive industry, estimates plant production for the week ended October 12, at 31,643 cars and trucks, compared with 24,770 for the preceding week. Output during the like week of 1934 was 25,401 units. A steady upward movement is looked for with the 1936 models.

Rumors of Peace Cut Grain Prices

Wheat Off 2 Cents; Corn and Oats Down.

By the Associated Press.

Chicago, Oct. 14.—Rome reports of willingness of Mussolini to discuss terms of peace went hand in hand with wheat market tumbles today. From start to finish wheat values were on the downgrade, with beneficial rains in Argentina giving added momentum. Persistent liquidating pressure on the part of Eastern speculators formed a notable feature. Cotton Mills Speed Pace as Exports Double September Consumption Is Far Ahead of a Year Ago.

By the Associated Press.

Cotton consumed during September was reported yesterday by the Census Bureau to have totaled 449,126 bales of lint and 61,127 of linters, compared with 408,410 and 57,866 during August this year, and 294,414 and 53,913 during September last year.

Cotton on hand September 30 was held as follows:

In consuming establishments, 716,807 bales of lint and 144,117 of linters, compared with 644,926 and 159,235 on August 31 this year, and 1,057,900 and 196,160 on September 30 last year.

In public storage and at compresses, 7,148,651 bales of lint and 28,668 of linters, compared with 5,892,836 and 27,778 on August 31 this year, and 7,617,064 and 31,018 on September 30 last year.

United States September cotton exports were shown by Commerce Department figures to have doubled those of August and to have increased slightly over September last year.

Commerce Department experts said there usually was a gain between August and September, and attached no special significance to the figures.

September exports were 487,000 bales, valued at $31,390,000, against 241,000 bales, valued at $16,213,000 in August, and against 454,000 bales, valued at $31,779,000 in September, 1934.

Highlights and Background Of Financial News and Trends

Industrial Shares Reach New Highs; Government Bonds Higher; Wheat and Corn Lower.

By Frank MacMillen,
Associated Press Financial Writer.

New York, Oct. 14.—New highs for 1935 in the industrial section and a modest recovery by railroad issues gave the stock market a bright look today. The Associated Press industrial average closed 0.9 of a point higher at 69.5, a new high for the year, while the average of 60 stocks braced up 0.6 of a point to 50.1. A total of 1,597,990 shares changed hands, compared with 2,074,862 on Friday.

Brokers said the generally favorable tone of business news stimulated the demand for industrials. Rail shares perked up, after early easiness owing to the indications of higher loadings contained in early reports.

The buyng of industrial equities was marked by a particularly brisk demand for the so-called specialties. Net gains among the favored shares ranged from 1 to 4 or more points.

Chrysler was heavily bought and jumped up 3⅞ to close at 81¾, a new high since 1929. General Motors ran up 1⅛ to close at a new recovery top of 48⅝. In the background of this buying was Cram's estimate of automobile production at 31,643 last week, compared with 24,770 the previous week and 25,401 a year ago.

Borg-Warner up 4.

Realization that the heavy automobile production season lies directly ahead also brought a whirr to the motor accessory and parts issues. Borg-Warner was up 4 at 62¾, Briggs gained 1½ at 51, and Electric Auto-Lite rose a point to 34, all three closing at new 1935 highs.

Other isues which turned new highs for the year or longer with gains of fractions to 3 or more points included Coca-Cola at 252, Deere at 44⅜, Gimbel at 6½, Libby-Owens Glass at 41¼, Link Belt at 40, Loew's at 46½, Macy at 52, Mengel at 6¼, National Cash Register at 19¼, Thompson Products at 23½, United States Gypsum at 76, Wesson Oil at 46½, Western Union at 54 and Westinghouse at 84⅞.

Radio preferred "B" bounded ahead 5¼ to 79¼, a new high, and RKO was up 1⅜ at a new top of 5⅞. Buying of both stocks was attributed in Wall street to the recently announced purchase of a "substantial" part of Radio Corporation's holdings in RKO by Atlas Corporation.

Encouraging news from the industrial front was the American Iron & Steel Institutes estimate of production this week at 50.4 per cent of capacity, compared with 49.7 a week ago and 22.8 per cent a year ago.

Cotton Prospects Rise.

The trade horizon was brightened by the report on September cotton consumption which was shown to be about 50 per cent ahead of last year and 10 per cent above August. The gain in exports over August and September a year ago was seen in Wall Street as reflecting the improved competitive price position of the American staple relative to prices of foreign growths. War buying was also cited.

Recovery hopes were given a smart boost by the report of F. W. Dodge Corporation, which showed residential construction contracts for September at $41,810,800 in 37 States, compared with $40,528,300 in August and $17,853,600 in September a year ago. The nine months' volume was about 80 per cent above the like period of last year.

The bond market was featured by a rise in United States Government obligations which netted gains of from six thirty-seconds to ten thirty-seconds. The domestic corporate list was quiet and uneventful, although low-priced rail issues were generally lower.

In the foreign exchange market the pound sterling was down one-eighth of a cent at $4.90¼. French francs were unchanged at 6.59 cents. The Italian lira was .01 of a cent higher at 8.12 cents.

Wheat closed with losses of 1¾ to 2⅜ cents a bushel. Corn was down ⅛ to ⅞ cents. Cotton ended 5 to 30 cents a bale lower.

Investigation Of Paramount To Be Pressed

Reorganization of Film Company Flayed by Rep. Sabath.

By the Associated Press.

New York, Oct. 14.—Asserting the Paramount-Publix Corporation was reorganized for the benefit of "certain groups," Representative Adolph J. Sabath (Democrat), Illinois, today ordered investigators for the congressional committee inquiring into business reorganizations, of which he is chairman, to "get the lowdown on the whole situation." Sabath said he would provide a larger staff for further investigation of Paramount-Publix.

Sabath lashed out at "financial combinations," asserting that committees and attorneys engaged in many reorganizations "were controlled by the banks that first floated the bonds." His remarks came during questioning of Sir William Wiseman, a partner in Kuhn, Loeb & Co. and a director of the Paramount-Publix Corporation, by Meyer Kraushaar, the committee's chief counsel.

"Millions Ruined."

Sabath described practices in many business reorganizations as "damnable," adding, "millions have been ruined and sent to their graves."

Frank A. Vanderlip, former president of the National City Bank, was questioned about his purchases of Paramount-Publix stocks and bonds while chairman of a bondholders' protective committee. Kraushaar said Vanderlip had purchased $113,000 worth of bonds at from 36 to 51 between February 1 and June 1, 1934, and profited to the extent of $56,000.

"If that is true," the banker replied, "I am delighted. That's more than I anticipated."

Kraushaar asserted that transactions during receivership of the Paramount - Publix Corporation showed need of amendment of Section 77-B of the bankruptcy act.

Home Building Is 80 Per Cent Over Last Year

Heavy Decline Reported in Government Construction.

By the Associated Press.

New York, Oct. 14.—Residential building contracts let in the 37 Eastern States during September totaled $41,810,800, compared with $40,528,300 in August, and $17,853,600 in September, last year, according to F. W. Dodge Corporation.

The September volume brought the figures for the first nine months of 1935 up to $338,907,500, compared with $188,080,100 in the same period in 1934. This gain of about 80 per cent, the corporation says in its summary, was entirely due to improvement in private activity as distinguished from public housing undertakings.

Heavy losses in governmental projects from last year has resulted in a lower total volume of construction in the first three quarters of this year, despite the improvement in residential construction, the corporation states.

This year the total for that period was $1,203,507,200 as against $1,191,697,700 in the same period in 1934. For September alone, the corporation reported, total awards for all classes of construction aggregated $167,376,200, compared with $168,557,200 in August and $110,151,200 in September, 1934.

On the basis of results so far the corporation says residential building has finally arrived at the $400,000,000 mark for a 12-month period and continues as the most important single development in the construction field.

EVEN WHEN THE GOING WAS HARDEST
this Bank has never "Marked Time"

FORTY-SIX years is a period long enough to have tested the policies and strength of any institution. And what with a world war, a world depression, and many minor ones, the period from 1889 to the present has been a trying time for American Banks.

Yet, during this period this Bank has shown consistent growth . . . has never "marked time." Today our resources are greater than at any time in our history and our customers exceed seventy thousand.

Sound banking! That is the key to our uninterrupted growth . . . to the increasing confidence which our depositors have shown in our policies. Feel free to come in at any time and talk about your financial problems. Any officer of this progressive bank will be glad to see you.

Strange as It Seems —By John Hix

For further proof address the author, inclosing a stamped envelope for reply. Reg. U. S. Pat Off.

WHEN Nero, Emperor of Rome, decided to murder his mother, his cruel fancy reached a new high—he had a boat built especially for her, one designed so that it would fall to pieces at a given signal. With all the attention of an affectionate son, he received her on a visit and then induced her to board the death ship. The plot went off according to plans, except for one mistake—Nero had not counted on his mother's ability to swim. She escaped by swimming out of the wreckage and safely reached her own home, but soon her home was surrounded by soldiers of the Emperor who then killed her in cold blood.

After the murder, Nero was panic-stricken by his own act. It was not until six months later that he re-entered Rome, for by that time his fears were allayed by officially spread reports that his mother had fallen victim to her own plot against him.

At Bhir, in India, there still remains a memory of the fourteenth century sultan, Mohammed Toghlak—a tomb built and dedicated to his extracted tooth. The sultan, suffering from a toothache, had the offending tooth pulled. He then caused to be erected a magnificent tomb where the dead tooth was buried in the midst of a barbaric ceremony.

Annoyed by the umpire calling several faults against him, Bill Tilden made sure of legal serves by standing almost flat-footed to serve the final game of the 1927 French championship. Even though he faced the formidable Renee Lacoste, he won with four straight aces.

$50,000 to Be Asked for Inch of Paper

By the United Press.

London, Oct. 14.—A square-inch scrap of paper will be offered for sale here October 30 at a price of not less than $50,000.

This is the value put upon a one-cent magenta British Guiana stamp of 1856 by its owner, Mrs. Pascal Costa Scala, wife of the late M. Hind, who during his lifetime possessed one of the most valuable stamp collections in the world.

The stamp is roughly composed from ordinary printer's type and is the only one of its kind known to be in existence at present.

In 1876, a 14-year-old schoolboy found this stamp hidden away in an attic amongst a bundle of old, forgotten letters. Liking its color, he decided to add it to his collection. Later he sold it to a stamp collector for six shillings ($1.50).

Some years afterward this collector sold his entire collection for $625 to Thomas Ridpath, of Liverpool.

Count Phillippe von Ferrari, once renowned collector, bought it for $775 from Ridpath. The rarity of the issue having been established, Hind was forced to pay $36,715 in 1922 when the Ferrari collection was disposed of.
